Congress Asked To Postpone Calling of Older Registrants

Selective Service Amend- ment Asked by Draft Headquarters.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(P)—Legislation empowering President Roosevelt to defer the training of older draft registrants was recommended to congress by selective service headquarters today on the ground that younger men are best qualified for military duty.

The request, made by Brigadier General Lewis B. Hershey, deputy draft director, in a letter to Speaker Rayburn, did not say at what age the deferment should start. Present draft age limits are 21 through 35 years.

Informed circles said, however, that there had been discussion among draft officials of deferring all those who had reached age 31. Suggestions also have been made that all those 26 years and more be deferred.

Hershey's letter and proposed amendment to the draft law were immediately referred to the house military committee, whose chairman, Representative May, Democrat, Kentucky, said, "We're going to take our time on it." He said there would be hearings in advance of any committee action. Some committee members have in past weeks expressed opposition to any changes in the draft law until it has been in operation a year or more.

The deferment plan, as proposed by Hershey, would not constitute an outright exemption.

"Men who are liable for training and service under the act and who are deferred under (Presidential) rules and regulations," Hershey said, "would be classified into a deferred class but would continue to be liable and available for training and service if circumstances necessitated the termination of the deferment."

"I am informed," Hershey declared, "that men in the younger age brackets are best qualified for the training and service contemplated under the act."

"Also, in view of the provisions for retaining the trainees in the reserves for a period of 10 years, it is desirable that the age of those trained be kept as low as the national interest will permit, so that the reserve forces will be composed of men whose effectiveness will remain at a high level throughout that period."

Strike Closes 11 Shipyards In California

Half Billion Defense Contracts Affected by Walkout.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

A joint strike by AFL and CIO machinists yesterday closed 11 California shipyards and drydocks which have $508,000,000 worth of warship and defense contracts.

The strike by the 1,700 machinists, in face of protests from government and high union officials, affected between 15,000 and 20,000 workers.

The federal government stepped in in an attempt to settle a strike of more than 900 skilled craftsmen, tying up $3,000,000 worth of a $30,000,000 project at the navy's big South Boston drydock, and to check a second walkout in the main navy yard.

Conference Called.

Ernest A. Johnson, secretary-treasurer of the Building and Construction Trades Council (AFL), said a conference offer came by telephone from the Office of Production Management in Washington as union heads were considering calling out 300 additional union workers in the navy yard.

Johnson asserted he and Edwin E. Graves, the union's general agent, would leave for Washington to join Council President John Coyne today in a 9 a. m. conference with Rear Admiral Moreel, navy chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks.

The strike was called, Johnson said, in protest of 1,200 WPA and civil service employees working at the navy base. The union did not picket the drydock and non-union workers were not molested. The drydock work stoppage did not directly affect ship building operations at the yard, Johnson said.

16 Hurt in Clash.
In connection with a teamsters' strike, police at Detroit said at least 16 men were injured when fighting broke out as the Carrier Lumber Company attempted to move trucks manned by non-union workers. AFL strikers seeking union recognition and wage increases, hurled bricks and stones. The present wage scale was not revealed.

The United Automobile Workers (CIO) in Detroit set 7 a. m. Thursday as a strike deadline affecting 160,000 workers in 60 General Motors Corporation plants while preparations were made to resume negotiations with corporation officials and National Defense Mediation Board representatives at Washington.

NO MORE HEILS—Rudolf Hess, right, official No. 2 heir to the Nazi realm, is seen here as he greeted Hitler on the occasion of a Nazi party rally at Nurnberg, Germany. Now he has landed in Scotland after an unexplained airplane flight from the Reich.

Actions of One-Time Confidant of Hitler Shrouded in Mystery

Erstwhile Closest Adviser of Nazi Leader Breaks Ankle in Drop; Ru- mored Bearing Peace Plan.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

LONDON (Tuesday), May 13.—Rudolf Hess, head of the German Nazi party and one of the oldest and closest confidantes of Adolf Hitler, has landed by parachute in Britain under circumstances suggesting the most profoundly important desertion in all history.

The British government announced from the home of Prime Minister Churchill at No. 10 Downing street that Hess was in a Glasgow hospital under treatment for a broken ankle suffered in floating down from a German Messerschmitt fighting plane near there.

While the British statement did not specifically say that he had deserted, it made three observations of seeming inescapable significance:

That Hess had brought along photographs taken at varying years in his life to establish his identity if it were questioned.

That he had arrived in a plane which could not possibly have had enough gasoline for a return to Germany—and thus, inferentially, that his trip was clearly not a one-man offensive but a one-way flight.

That the Messerschmitt's guns were empty.

(Moreover, the British radio in a broadcast heard in the United States referred to Hess as "the only idealist" in the Nazi high command.)

He flew on in the direction of Glasgow and later—just when was not disclosed—his Messerschmitt crashed. He had bailed out. Taken to the Glasgow hospital he first identified himself as "Horn," but later by his correct name.

His photographs were examined, the government said, "by several people who knew him personally." All these agreed that they were in fact pictures of Hess. To check still further, an official of the British foreign office "closely acquainted with him before the war" was sent by airplane to Glasgow to see the patient.

The announcement made the identification positive by referring to him as "Rudolf Hess, the Deputy Fuehrer of Germany and party leader of the National Socialist party."

Subsequently, the ministry of information declared that he had been identified as Rudolf Hess beyond "all possible doubt." The implications of all this, while cautiously avoided by government officials, were fully and openly discussed by those of the Nazis.

The story of Hess' strange and

No Cuts Seen For University System Pay Roll

Reduced Budget Not To Affect Salaries, Beaver Says.

Salaries of professors and teachers in the University System of Georgia will not be cut next year, Chairman Sandy Beaver, of the State Board of Regents, said yesterday as the board set its budget at $1,700,000.

Governor Talmadge held a lengthy conference with members of the finance committee and agreed to slash only $50,000 from last year's appropriation of $1,750,000 for maintenance.

"This reduction will make it necessary for us to curtail our operations to some extent, but the curtailment will not be serious," Chairman Beaver said. "We do not propose to cut salaries but we will order the head of each institution to operate more efficiently."

Actually the regents' total budget last year amounted to $2,150,000.

Entertainment of Service Men Called Private Citizens' Job

Co-operation in Plan To Raise $11,000,000 for Camp Recreational Program Urged by Dewey at Luncheon Here.

By LEE FUHRMAN.

"If we can raise $60,000,000 for the relief of people in Europe, then we certainly ought to be able to raise $11,000,000 for our own boys," Thomas E. Dewey, New York's famous racket-busting district attorney, said here yesterday in a plea for co-operation of private citizens in seeing that the men of Uncle Sam's fighting forces "get a decent break."

Dewey spoke informally at a luncheon at the Capital City Club, where plans were discussed for Atlanta's participation in a national campaign to raise a total of $10,765,000 under auspices of the United Service Organizations for National Defense, Incorporated.

Outlining aims of the U. S. O. to "do something about the problem of the service man's entertainment and recreation," Dewey stressed that this is a "job for the private citizen and not for the government."

"It is the task of all of us to see that the private lives of the men in the service are kept free, and not regimented by one man or a group of men. When the government takes over the private lives of its men in uniform, then we will begin to abandon one of the last symbols of democracy."

Preston S. Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power Company and a member of the U. S. O.'s national board of directors, announced at the luncheon that Major Trammell Scott had accepted chairmanship of the Atlanta campaign, when $59,000 will be raised as part of the nationwide campaign June 3 to July 4 for a total of $10,765,000.

Dewey explained that the government will spend a total of $15,000,000 in building 366 centers for service men near 100 localities throughout the nation where large

F. D. R. Postpones Tomorrow's Radio Talk to Latin Americans

Envoys of Neighbor Nations and Wives Invited to White House for 'Chat' May 27; President Much Improved.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(P)—The speech which President Roosevelt was to deliver Wednesday night to the diplomats of Latin America was cancelled today and the White House said that Mr. Roosevelt, instead, would make a "fireside chat" on the night of May 27.

The address which had been scheduled for Wednesday had been heralded in some quarters as one likely to prove of paramount importance. But Mr. Roosevelt has been ill since Tuesday, and a reception at the Pan American Union which he was to have addressed was cancelled.

The board of governors of the union, meeting this afternoon, adopted a resolution to defer the reception until the President felt better able to attend.

Secretary Hull, presiding as chairman, then extended on behalf of the President an oral invitation for the heads of Latin-American diplomatic missions in this country to be the chief executive's guests at the White House on May 27.

The diplomats, their wives and families, said Presidential Secretary Stephen Early will be invited to the White House at 9 p. m., and will assemble in the diplomatic reception room on the ground floor to be present when Mr. Roosevelt delivers a radio talk to the nation between 9:30 and 10 p. m., eastern standard time.

Early said it was up to radio companies what distribution the address will receive, but added it "probably will be world wide."

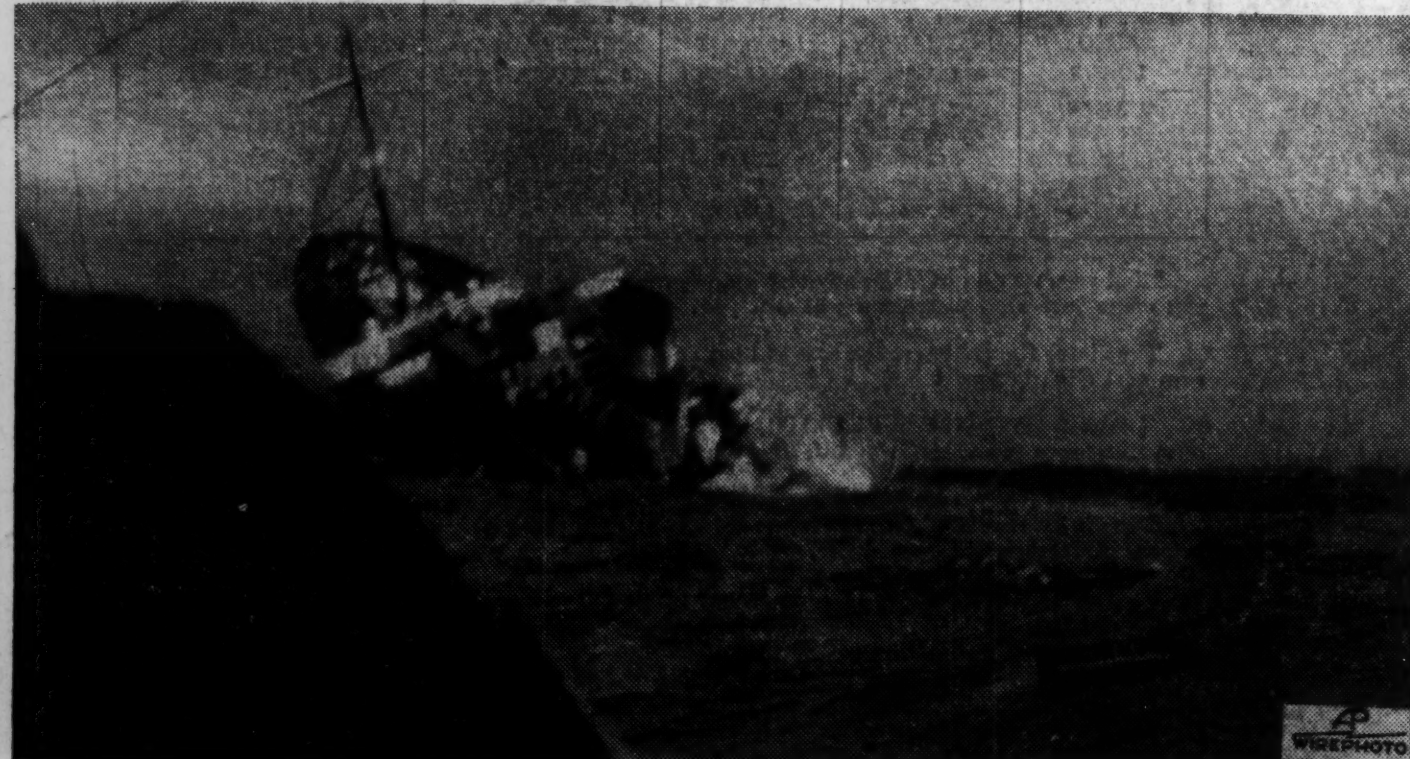

When newsmen inquired about the character of the May 27 address, he said a fireside chat was in a somewhat different category from a regular broadcast.

Asked whether it could be assumed that hemisphere defense would be discussed, in view of the nature of the occasion, Early replied that the speech was "not on paper" and probably would not be drafted before May 24 or 25.

Although the President still was in bed, his condition was announced today as much improved.

Dorothy Thompson Asks: What Prompted Stalin's Act?

Why did Joseph Stalin decide to become premier and, therefore, the head of the Soviet Union, which he has indirectly ruled so long? Why in this particular moment?

Internally, his assumption of authority as the titular head of the state changes nothing. Russia is governed by the Communist party, and the secretary-general of the Communist party can dictate to any head of the state.

The reasons are external. As secretary-general of the party, even though that role makes him the actual dictator of the Soviet Union, Stalin cannot personally confer with the heads of other states. He can send Molotov to confer with Hitler, and he can re-

Surrender of Nazi Hess Surpasses Wildest Dreams of British

Party Leader Is Fantastic Prize of War

Beetle-Browed Henchman Defied Hitler To Fly to Enemy Haven.

By The Associated Press.
Rudolf Hess, Hitler's beetle-browed henchman and the official No. 2 heir to the Nazi realm, has parachuted to the soil of Britain from a commandeered Nazi fighter plane he took aloft in direct defiance of the Fuehrer's orders.

As the Nazi party leader and erstwhile Nazi war councillor, Hess thus became a prize of war beyond the wildest dreams of the British.

So fantastic was his solo flight out of the Reich that the British themselves, after thorough identification of their hostage, announced it only late Monday night, two days after he landed in Scotland, and they were still openly at a loss over what to make of it.

If Hess should talk he could lay bare to the British the entire framework of their Nazi enemy—information of inestimable value.

The first clue that something had happened to Hess came from Germany Monday. The Nazi party of which Hess was leader, announced that though Hess had been forbidden by Hitler to fly, he took a plane from Augsburg, Bavaria, Saturday at 6 p. m., and presumably had met an "accident" since he had not been heard from since. The official announcement said he had left a note indicating he had "hallucinations."

The implication was that he was dead.

The British Broadcasting Company late Monday night was in the midst of commenting on this and eulogizing Hess as "the only idealist" in the Nazi regime when it suddenly broke off to deliver the breath-taking announcement from No. 10 Downing street, the prime minister's residence, that he had parachuted to land in Scotland and was positively identified in a Glasgow hospital.

Only that and nothing more, for the moment at least.

But it was clear that Hess' disappearance from Germany was no accident.

And assuming that the Nazi announcement correctly gave his point of departure, he could not have made so great a mistake for it is more than 800 air miles from Augsburg to Glasgow—the absolute maximum range of a fully-fueled Messerschmitt 110 fighter plane.

Augsburg sounded like the correct spot of Hess' takeoff, because a Messerschmitt factory is located there, and it was there on May Day that Hess addressed the workers with a commendation of their war effort.

It was there, apparently, that he chose to break the oath he had so often administered to new Nazis: "I swear to Adolf Hitler an unbreakable fealty and unquestioned obedience.

"Woe to anyone breaking this oath, for he shall be cast out from society."

For two days the British public apparently had not known what a prize had flown to their isle. When Germany found out, officials still insisted his fate was unknown.

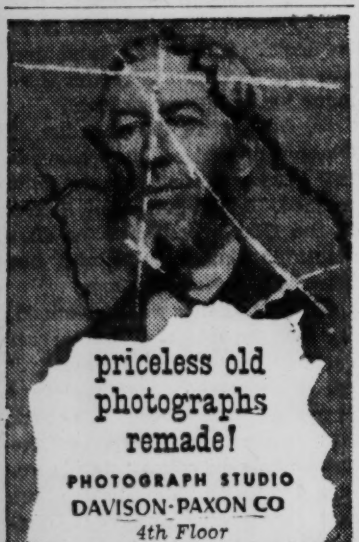

Comparison of the German and British announcements, however, brought the picture into sharp focus. The Germans said Hess' adjutant who permitted him to fly were under arrest. So it was apparent that, either with the connivance of a close personal friend or by sheer personal bravado, Hitler's erstwhile handyperson had seized a plane and fled direct to Britain from Germany.

Hess had been closest to Hitler. Although Reichsmarshal Goering was the officially designated successor to Hitler in case of death, Hess, because he was personally far closer to his Fuehrer, ostensibly was next in line.

He was with Hitler eight days ago when the Fuehrer addressed the Reichstag. He was on that occasion smiling, a trifle morose, as always. If he had "hallucinations" they were well concealed.

But today the 47-year-old Hess had made good his scheme of escape in hairbreadth fashion that was proof positive of his fertility of imagination—and of his courage, since with an unarmed German plane he risked death from British guns with no means of defending himself.

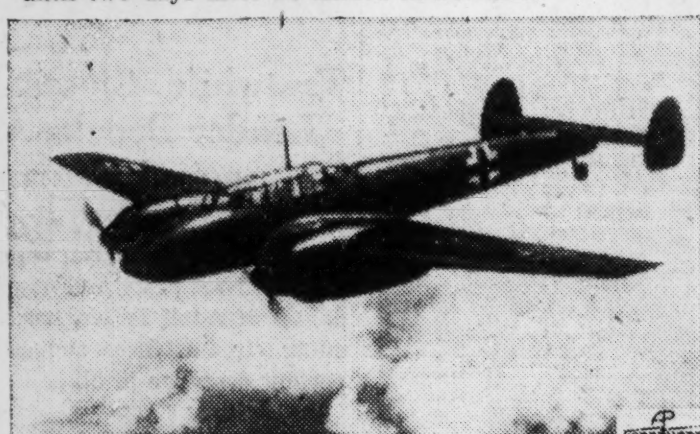

The magnitude of his determination was indicated in another way, for he left behind his wife, Ilse, whom he married in 1927, and their 3-year-old son. What their fate will be depends on Adolf Hitler.

A "BEE" LINE—Hess probably followed this direct route in his flight from Augsburg in southern Germany to Glasgow. His capture was not announced by the British until two days after he landed in Scotland.

Rudolf Hess Flees Reich; Goes to Britain

public still awake when the news broke.

The people spoke of it as an indication of serious disaffection in Germany, and wondered if it could be considered an authentic indication of a breakup in the Nazi top command.

The government's statement, issued from the No. 10 Downing street home of Prime Minister Churchill did not directly suggest Hess' motive in flying to Britain.

(Rumors circulated in London that Hess brought peace proposals, but that they did not have the support of Adolf Hitler, the United Press reported.)

Hess is 47 and was head of the German National Socialist Party. At the outset of the war Hitler designated him as his political heir once removed, putting only Reichsmarshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering ahead of him.

The text of the official announcement issued from Prime Minister Churchill's home at 11:20 p. m. said:

"Rudolf Hess, the deputy Fuehrer of Germany and party leader of the National Socialist Party, has landed in Scotland in the following circumstances:

On the night of Saturday, the 10th, a Messerschmitt 110 was reported by our patrol to have crossed the coast of Scotland and to be flying in the direction of Glasgow.

"Since the Messerschmitt 110 would not have fuel to return to Germany this report was at first disbelieved.

"Later on a Messerschmitt 110 crashed near Glasgow with its guns loaded. Shortly afterwards a German officer who had bailed out was found with his parachute in the neighborhood suffering from a broken ankle.

"He was taken to a hospital in Glasgow, where he at first gave his name as Horn but later on he declared that he was Rudolf Hess.

"He brought with him various photographs of himself at different ages apparently in order to establish his identity.

"These photographs were deemed to be photographs of Hess by several people who knew him personally. Accordingly an officer of the foreign office who was closely acquainted with him before the war has been sent up by airplane to see him in the hospital."

The circumstances surrounding Hess' flight from Germany and his parachuting arrival were not immediately determined in the capital but the government dispatched a foreign office official to interview him.

There was no report that the wreckage of Hess' plane had been found.

It was recalled that the deputy sat next to Hitler at the May 4 Reichstag session.

(Hitler's speech on that occasion was in great part an attack on Prime Minister Churchill. In a reference to the prospective strength of the German army in 1942, he also intimated belief that the war would not be over this year.)

(The British radio in a broadcast heard in New York by CBS prefaced its announcement of Hess' landing by terming him "the only idealist in the Nazi hierarchy.")

Tall, dark, bushy-browed and sombre—Hess was one of the most powerful figures in the Nazi regime, both publicly and behind the scenes.

Since the World War he had been an intimate of Adolf Hitler, whom he met on the battlefields of France.

A few months after the Nazi party came into power in Germany he was made Hitler's deputy in all party affairs.

On September 1, 1939, the day Hitler donned the field uniform of the German army to announce to the Reichstag his invasion of Poland, Hess was named after Goering as the No. 2 choice to carry on national socialism should anything happen to the Fuehrer.

By many observers he was regarded as the probable actual successor of Hitler because of his strong position in the party and the inner Nazi circle.

His influence over Hitler was reputed to be strong. It was to him that Hitler dictated "Mein Kampf," the handbook of Nazism which was written while both were prisoners in Landsberg fortress for their part in the bloody and unsuccessful Munich beer hall putsch of 1923.

He was one of the first members of Hitler's Storm Troopers, and soon was the Fuehrer's private secretary. As such he often made appearances for Hitler when the latter could not personally attend.

In the stormy period of the expansion on the party he always was at Hitler's side.

Directed Purges.

To him were entrusted the ruthless measures of a party house-cleaning when inner dissensions threatened before the party finally rose to power.

Again, during the blood purge of 1934, he stood by Hitler, though some of his close friends were among the purged.

He saw to it that drastic measures against the Jews were carried out.

Later, he took a prominent role in formation of the Rome-Berlin Axis, going to the border to meet Premier Mussolini and escorting him to Munich where the understanding was being reached.

When the war came he was made a member of the secret war cabinet.

Hess was born April 26, 1894, at Alexandria, Egypt, and thus had a large interest in Germany's plans in the Near East and Mediterranean. He was the son of a German importer.

Escaped Assassination.

He went to school in Switzerland and Godesburg, specializing in economics, but when the World War broke out he joined the Bavarian infantry and saw heavy action, particularly at Verdun. He was wounded three times in the war, and a fourth time during Germany's bitter internal strife of post-war years.

He escaped assassination on November 8, 1939, by but a few minutes when a bomb exploded in a Munich's burgerbrau cellar just after Hitler had finished addressing a meeting of Nazi stalwarts celebrating the 1923 putsch.

He was known for his temperate habits, and neither drank nor smoked.

In 1927 he married the daughter of a German army doctor, by whom he had one son, born November 11, 1937.

Ranked After Goering.

After Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Hess was Hitler's choice for the succession to Reichsfuehrer in the event of Hitler's death.

This is the Nazi party's announcement:

"Party Comrade Hess, who because of his failing health for years has been strictly forbidden by the Fuehrer to be active in aviation, was able, contrary to these instructions, to acquire an airplane again recently."

"On Saturday, May 10, at about 6 p. m., Party Member Hess started on a flight at Augsburg from which he has not returned to this day."

"A letter left behind unfortunately shows in its confusion the traces of mental disorder which led to fears that Party Fellow Member Hess was a victim of hallucinations."

Adjutant Arrested.

"The Fuehrer immediately ordered the arrest of adjutants of Party Comrade Hess who alone knew about those flights and did not hinder them, and did not report them in spite of instructions known to them to have been given by the Fuehrer."

"Under those circumstances the National Socialist Movement unfortunately must assume that the party fellow member has crashed in a plane and had an accident somewhere."

AMERICANS DIE IN RAID.

Speculation Rife on Reason For Hess' Act

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(AP)—The flight of Rudolf Hess, Nazi party leader and probably Adolf Hitler's most intimate associate, into British hands in Scotland aroused intense speculation in diplomatic quarters tonight on the possibility of a split in the Nazi hierarchy.

Diplomats familiar with Nazi politics described Hess as a tremendously important figure in Germany. His power as party leader was strengthened by his close personal relations with Hitler dating back to early party history.

As Hitler's deputy for party affairs, Hess was the controller of political patronage and was considered almost fanatically devoted to the Fuehrer.

Wore Brown Shirt.

Tall, dark and somewhat retiring, he usually wore only the brown shirt and trousers of the S. A. uniform—sometimes appearing coarsely even at the most formal functions.

Whatever the circumstances of his flight and even accepting the German version casting doubt on his sanity, informed diplomats agreed that it would prove a severe shock to the German people.

Speculation about a possible break in high Nazi ranks centered on the theory that Hess fled Germany for some reason and intentionally landed in the one country which certainly would not send him back.

Some sources even suggested that Hess might have been escaping from another Nazi "purge" such as the famous one of June 30, 1934, when numerous high party men and Hitler intimates were slain.

If a party split had occurred and Hess was fleeing, it was believed here that the Germans might logically brand him as mentally unbalanced in order to discredit anything he might say.

The reason for the party break, if there was one, was a puzzle. Hess was said to have tried to avoid intra-party disputes, but it was thought that his close personal association with Hitler might have aroused jealousy among other party leaders.

Whatever the circumstances of his flight and even accepting the German version casting doubt on his sanity, informed diplomats agreed that it would prove a severe shock to the German people.

Speculation about a possible break in high Nazi ranks centered on the theory that Hess fled Germany for some reason and intentionally landed in the one country which certainly would not send him back.

Some sources even suggested that Hess might have been escaping from another Nazi "purge" such as the famous one of June 30, 1934, when numerous high party men and Hitler intimates were slain.

If a party split had occurred and Hess was fleeing, it was believed here that the Germans might logically brand him as mentally unbalanced in order to discredit anything he might say.

Speculation Rife on Reason For Hess' Act

Diplomatic Quarters Suspect Split in Nazi Party.

By J. C. STARK.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(AP)—The flight of Rudolf Hess, Nazi party leader and probably Adolf Hitler's most intimate associate, into British hands in Scotland aroused intense speculation in diplomatic quarters tonight on the possibility of a split in the Nazi hierarchy.

Diplomats familiar with Nazi politics described Hess as a tremendously important figure in Germany. His power as party leader was strengthened by his close personal relations with Hitler dating back to early party history.

As Hitler's deputy for party affairs, Hess was the controller of political patronage and was considered almost fanatically devoted to the Fuehrer.

Hess 'More Sane Than Crazy' In Flight, Psychiatrist Says

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(AP)—One of the country's leading psychiatrists declared today that Rudolf Hess, Hitler's second lieutenant who landed from a Messerschmitt plane in Scotland Saturday, was probably "much more sane than crazy."

Dr. Winfred Overholser, head of St. Elizabeth's hospital, the federal government's principal institution for the insane, said that while it was possible that Hess "got the jitters and thought the world was coming to an end" he probably did a cool, sane job of calculation and estimated that his chances were better in being interned in England than they were in staying in Germany.

Even if the man were insane he still could pilot an airplane, the psychiatrist said, "but it is much more reasonable to think that he was in full possession of his faculties and merely wished to escape" from some situation that he considered no longer tenable for him.

Such an escape by a man who had been discouraged from flying by Hitler himself would indicate calm deliberation and planning well in advance which a man with a very unbalanced mind would be hardly capable of carrying out, Dr. Overholser said.

Hess Gossiped With Farmer For an Hour

Scottish Ploughman Found Fleeing Nazi in Good Humor.

GLASGOW, Tuesday, May 13.—(AP)—A Scottish ploughman told today how he armed himself with a pitchfork to challenge a Nazi parachuting to earth on his farm but that the "chutist"—Rudolf Hess—offered no resistance and was in good humor. He gossiped for an hour before the authorities took him away.

Totally unaware of the political stature of his air-Boche visitor, David McLean found Hess lying in the field, his ankle broken and assisted him to his cottage. Two British soldiers who turned up on routine duty thinking they had caught an ordinary German airman chaffed him about his bad luck in bailing out.

This was McLean's story:

"I was in the house and every-one else was in bed and I heard a plane roaring overhead. I ran to the back of the farm. I heard a crash and saw the plane burst into flames about 200 yards away."

"I was amazed and a bit frightened when I saw the parachute coming slowly downward. I could see a man swinging from the harness. I concluded it was a German airman bailing out and ran back to my house for help. They were all asleep. I looked around for a weapon but found nothing except a hay fork."

"Fearing I might lose the airman I hurried round by myself again back of the house and in the field I saw a man lying down with his parachute nearby."

"He smiled and I helped him to his feet. He thanked me but I could see he'd injured his foot some way. I helped him into the house. By this time my mother and sister were out of bed and made tea. He declined the tea and smiled when we told him we were very fond of it. He asked for a glass of water."

"We sent word to the authorities and in the meantime he chatted freely to us and showed us pictures of his little boy, of whom he spoke very proudly."

"He told us he had left Germany about four hours before and had landed because nightfall was approaching. I could see from the way he spoke he was a man of culture. His English, although it had a foreign accent, was very clear and he understood every word we said to him."

"He was a very striking looking man wearing a magnificent flying suit. His watch and identity bracelet were of gold."

"He wouldn't discuss his journey. He was most gentlemanly in his attitude to my mother and sister and thanked us for what we had done for him. He was most anxious about the parachute, which he said he'd like to keep because it saved his life.

"When the officials came he greeted them with a smile and assured them he was unarmed and stood up and allowed them to search him. Then he was taken away."

Dr. Winfred Overholser, head of St. Elizabeth's hospital, the federal government's principal institution for the insane, said that while it was possible that Hess "got the jitters and thought the world was coming to an end" he probably did a cool, sane job of calculation and estimated that his chances were better in being interned in England than they were in staying in Germany.

Malaria Fight In State Cuts Cases 47,400

Saving of $7,000,000 in Five Years by Drainage Reported.

Largely because of the joint fight waged by the state department of health and the WPA against malaria, Georgia had 47,400 fewer cases during 1940 and citizens have been saved more than $7,000,000 in time and services during the past five years.

Working with the health department, WPA workers have built 926 miles of canals and pipe lines to drain almost 300,000 acres of mosquito-breeding marshes, federal and state agencies said yesterday.

At present workers are concentrating in counties with large military areas. Already projects have been completed in 41 counties and the result of the work is shown by the fact that there were 237 fewer malaria deaths in 1940 than in 1939.

White House Asked To Nominate Schroder

Senators Andrews and Pepper, of Florida, said yesterday in Washington they had requested the White House to send to the senate immediately the nominations of Roy Schroder to be regional director of the WPA with headquarters in Atlanta, and Wilbur Harkness to succeed Schroder as Florida administrator of WPA. Schroder is slated to succeed Robert L. MacDougall, who has been named to a Washington WPA post.

"HELP MEN IN UNIFORM"—That was the gist of the remarks here yesterday by Thomas E. Dewey, New York's famous racket-busting district attorney, when he addressed a luncheon on behalf of the United Service Organizations for National Defense, Incorporated. Left to right around the table are Walter Rich, Lieutenant Colonel Stacy Knopf, Dewey, Lieutenant Colonel John Fray, Preston S. Arkwright, Governor Talmadge, and Walter Hoving, president of the USO.

What's Back of Stalin's Move?

ceive the German ambassador, Mr. Ribbentrop, but he cannot himself confer with Hitler on an equal basis. For even in these gangster-ridden times there is such a thing as protocol.

Parley With Hitler Seen. Therefore we may assume that Stalin has made himself the head of the government, as well as of the party that rules the government, in order to be able personally to meet and confer with Hitler. And I think we may anticipate a meeting between the Communist and the Nazi dictators, probably on the soil of another country, within the next two or three weeks.

Why in another two or three weeks? Why not tomorrow? I think Stalin wants to wait that long to see what the United States is going to do and where the United States is going to do it. Stalin's dearest hope is that he will become enmeshed with Japan in the Far East, and thus settle his own uneasiness on that score. This is the whole sense of the Russian-Japanese nonaggression pact, and some of us, including this columnist, who tried to put a better face on it at the time of its announcement were following our wishes rather than our heads. Stalin will never trust Japan, but he is prepared to adopt a benevolent neutrality in case of a Japanese Far Eastern war against the United States and Great Britain.

Watches Uncle Sam. The extent to which the United States is involved will, however, determine his bargaining position with Hitler.

And Stalin needs to do some sharp bargaining. The theory that Stalin was settling matters in the east in order to free his hands in the west is correct to this extent: he wanted to increase his bargaining power in the west. He is certainly not going to take on the German armies. He wants to make another deal and make as good a one as he can.

For Stalin has lost a lot of ground. At the outset of this war, he hoped to make the Nazis pay for his benevolent neutrality, and to extract three advantages from the bargain: An improved position in the Baltic Sea, in the Black Sea, and access to the Persian Gulf.

Undoubtedly he had an understanding with Hitler about all three things. Hence his war against Finland and his occupation of the small independent Baltic states.

But with the occupation of Norway and German economic domination of Sweden, Stalin's gains in the Baltic are illusory. He is bottled up in the Baltic and Hitler has the key in his pocket.

Mussolini's Mistake. It was Russia's hope—and Germany's original intention—to keep the war out of the Balkans, at least until its last stage. Mussolini, who is anything but pro-Russian, prevented that by the attack on Greece.

Stalin hoped that the mere expression of his dissatisfaction with Hitler's occupation of Rumania would have an effect. It had no effect. His stronger protestations over the occupation of Bulgaria were equally ignored. His open support of the Yugoslav cause was treated by Hitler as a bluff.

Stalin did nothing but talk, and Hitler took every position he wanted. So by now Stalin has had both the Baltic and the Black Sea shot out from under him. He is bottled up in both of them. Only one envied position remains—the outlet of the Persian Gulf. Stalin will probably agree because he has to—to a Hitler move in Turkey, Syria, Suez, Iraq. In return he will probably demand the provinces of Erzurum and Kars, former Russian imperial possessions, and domination of groups of service men are concentrated. The funds to be raised by private subscription will be used to staff and operate the various centers, he added, pointing out that work of this kind is "a full time job which cannot be efficiently accomplished solely through volunteer workers."

Dewey arrived here at 1:20 o'clock from visits to army camps and naval stations in Virginia. He was accompanied by Walter Hoving, New York department store executive, who is president of the U. S. O.; Marshall Field, of Chicago, a director of the U. S. O.; and Lieutenant Colonel W. H. Wells, of the public relations staff of the War Department.

In an interview prior to the luncheon, Dewey, who, with the others, is on a tour of inspection of army camps all over the country, said:

"The principal purpose of my trip is to find out what the enlisted man wants. At Langley Field, for instance, after a conference with the colonels and majors and generals, I asked to consult a group of 10 to 15 enlisted men, picked at random, and with no officers present."

"I also followed this procedure at other camps, and at Norfolk, the navy's great naval base, and I plan to follow it on my other trips."

"What the enlisted man wants is a place to sit down when he is off the reservation, a place where he can write letters, take a bath, get a shave, and sleep overnight on a clean bed."

"He wants a place where he can take a decent girl. He wants to dance but he doesn't want to be in his present position of having to go to some place where there are a lot of chisellers and where the management is interested only in taking away as much of his monthly pay as he can get."

"The U. S. O.'s job is to provide these places of recreation, these meeting places, with limited food service and the other comforts the service man needs."

"Naturally, the American boy wants to get off the reservation and get away from discipline for a while. He wouldn't be an American boy if he didn't want to do this. So it is our job—the private citizen's—to keep him a free man. A man in the service shouldn't have to feel that he is in prison."

"There is a transportation problem involved also. In many areas, a man on leave can't get to a town located even a few miles from the reservation. Nobody wants to walk nine miles just to see a movie. So you see how big this job is, and how many angles there are to it."

Dewey said also that in his talks with the service men, he found no unreasonable demands, but that all the service man wanted was "a decent break," and the feeling that "the people were in back of him and interested in his welfare."

Sailors, he added, were interested in such recreations as skating rinks and swimming pools, and a good "ten-cent beer," while soldiers were principally interested in places to dance with decent "dates," a comfortable bed, and a meal that wouldn't spell financial ruin for a person earning $21 a month.

The U. S. O. is a quasi-official group which was set up at the request of the government, and includes representatives of local and national organizations such as the Travelers Aid, Jewish Welfare Board, National Catholic Community Service, and Young Women's Christian Association.

The Dewey party arrived at the municipal airport in the Army transport ship used by General George Marshall, chief of staff. However, the small signboard displaying four stars, insignia of a full general, was not hung out when the plane landed, as is customarily done when a general is aboard.

Among those present at the luncheon were Governor Talmadge, Mayor LeCraw, Clark Howell, editor and publisher of The Constitution; George C. Biggers, general manager of the Atlanta Journal; John K. Ottley, chairman of the board of the First National Bank; F. W. Blalock, president of the Fulton National Bank; Henry C. Heinz, vice president of the Citizens & Southern National Bank; James D. Robinson Jr., vice president, Trust Company of Georgia; Milton W. Bell, chairman of the Atlanta committee of the U. S. O.; Charles A. Collier, chairman of the Georgia U. S. O.; Walter Rich, president of Rich's, Inc.; Raymond A. Kline, chairman of the board, Davison-Paxon Company; J. P. Allen, of J. P. Allen & Company; C. A. Tevebaugh, regional director, U. S. O.; Arthur L. Harris, representing the Travelers Aid; Dr. David Marx, representing the Jewish Welfare Board; Bernard J. Kane, representing the National Catholic Community Service; Boyce Edens, of the Community Fund; Mrs. Francis Dwyer, of the Y. W. C. A.; Lieutenant Colonel Stacy Knopf, Fourth Corps Area public relations officer; Lieutenant Colonel John M. Fray, Fourth Corps Area morale officer; Colonel W. R. Nichols, Fourth Corps Area chief of staff.

000, but $400,000 of this was for construction of new buildings.

Chancellor S. V. Sanford said he had been assured by the Governor that the regents would get every dollar of the $1,700,000 appropriation. If this happens, the chancellor said, it probably would be the first time in the history of the Board Regents.

The cut in operating funds probably will mean that no new buildings will be constructed next year, George C. Woodruff, of Columbus, member of the finance committee, said. He added, however, that present structures on college campuses would not be allowed to deteriorate.

"The budget means that we'll have to operate with real efficiency—and I mean efficiency," Woodruff added.

The regents will attempt to decide where they can bring about savings of $50,000 before they meet again May 30 in Athens. At that time they will elect personnel for the coming year.

Peonage Charges Studied in Chicago

CHICAGO, May 12.—(AP)—A federal grand jury began an investigation today of charges that a wealthy planter of Oglethorpe county, Georgia, attempted to place about a dozen Chicago Negroes in a state of peonage.

Action was taken on the complaint of several Negroes who claimed that members of their race, formerly employed on Oglethorpe county plantations, had been falsely arrested here and taken south.

In some cases, the complainants charged, Georgia debtor statutes were applied to take the Negroes out of Illinois. About 20 witnesses have been subpoenaed.

70 Per Cent of Nazi U-Boats Sunk, Claim

LONDON, May 12.—(AP)—Brassey's Naval Annual, a British publication, appeared today with an estimate that more than 70 per cent of the German submarines commissioned in the past 12 months have been sunk.

Commander Harry Pursey, retired naval officer, wrote: "This rate, which should be possible of improvement, is probably greater than that of German replacement... and certainly greater than the supply of efficient crews available."

Leaders Afraid Of Proposed Hospital Plan

School, Labor Authorities Here Uncertain About Central Control

Labor and school administration leaders yesterday viewed with apprehension a proposed constitutional amendment to be submitted to voters in June which would provide for creation of a hospital authority through which Atlanta, Fulton and DeKalb counties would operate all public hospitals.

During a conference in Mayor LeCraw's office yesterday, Dewey L. Johnson, president of the Georgia Federation of Labor, and Albert Gossett, president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, expressed opposition to any proposal which would create an authority to spend taxpayers' money unless the authority is composed of elected representatives of the people.

Thomas W. Clift, school business manager, took the position that if the problem presented by the hospitals is solved, needed school improvements would be left to bear the whole burden of a projected bond issue without the influence of those interested in hospitals.

Thomas K. Glenn, chairman of the Grady board of trustees, and other members of the board, contended that the constitutional amendment should be approved and the city's interest could be protected in the contract which the municipality might make with the authority.

Patrol Group RAF Bombers Will Return Again Battle Home Today Nazi Shipyards

Four-Day Train and Boat Trip Leaves No Regrets.

By CAROLYN MCKENZIE, Constitution Staff Writer.
EMPHORIA, Va., May 12.—Eleven coaches of tired but happy schoolboy patrolmen will roll into Terminal station tomorrow morning after a four-day train and boat trip to Washington and points of interest in the vicinity of the nation's capital.

It was a good trip, and every boy and girl who made it had a lot of fun—but there'll be no regrets for most of them when they tumble off the train at home.

One particularly will be happy—Wayne Pearson, from Home Park school, who came down with a mild case of measles. The doctor said he could continue the trip if he'd stay bundled up, and so far he is doing fine. His finances ran a little low, because of the expense of buying fruit juices prescribed by the doctor, but he soon solved that. He charged a nickel a peek to all who came to observe his rash and cleared $1.17.

2,000 Attend

Horse Auction

A growing interest in saddle horses and in Atlanta as a stock center for the sale of the three and five-gaited animals attracted more than 2,000 persons last night to the stockyards, for the month's only saddle horse auction sale.

Between 300 and 400 animals went on the block and were sold under the direction of Auctioneer George Collins at prices ranging from $400 to a top of $750, averaging about $100 a head higher than at the four previous sales, according to C. N. Ragsdale, stock dealer. Most of the saddle horses were bred and trained in Tennessee, Kentucky, Iowa and Texas, presenting one of the finest and best bred bunches of riding animals ever assembled in Atlanta, dealers said.

"I WAS an average man...rocking along. The plus I needed to push ahead was lacking. One day a friend remarked: 'How do you feel?' I replied, 'All right...I guess, why?'"

This man found a way to go ahead. He reasoned, I am not as alert...keen or aggressive as I might be. That's why I am just rocking along.

He found his answer in the time-tested and tested S.S. Tonic. In the absence of a focal or organic disorder—S.S. Tonic will restore deficient iron in the blood...bring back color...step up your energy and help make "you feel like yourself again." Tone up your system...nail down your job...be in line for advancement. It is worth a good trial.

Pay Increase Rule Given by McLeod

An employer cannot grant wage or salary increases and later use them to cover overtime payments due under the wage and hour law, Regional Director J. R. McLeod, of the Wage and Hour Division, said here yesterday.

McLeod quoted as follows from a letter from Wage-Hour Administrator Philip B. Fleming:

"Payments made to employees cannot be wage or salary increases and extra compensation for overtime at one and the same time."

State police authorities from eight states in the southeast will meet at the Ansley hotel May 17 to discuss traffic and other law enforcement problems, with special emphasis on Army movements over southern highways that will result from huge training maneuvers during the summer.

Host to the meeting will be Major John E. Goodwin, commissioner of the Georgia State Patrol.

Japan's Force Spent, Chinese Leader States

Says Given Material, Economic Aid, China Will Win.

CHUNGKING, May 12.—(P)—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, in one of his rare speeches made public today, declared that Japan is so nearly exhausted by almost four years of Chinese resistance that China, given only material and economic aid, can whip her single-handed.

Significantly, the generalissimo coupled this assertion with a declaration that the resolution of the Americans "to defend the spirit of democracy" would "support the policy of their government to the point of war" and that "Japanese aggression has now neither the strength nor the audacity to risk a clash with America."

China needs neither the aid of an expeditionary force nor the action of a powerful navy from her friends, Chiang declared, to "put down this enemy of all who would dwell in peace on the shores of the Pacific."

The speech was made Saturday night at a farewell dinner given by Mme. Chiang Kai-Shek in honor of United States Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson, who is going to Australia as minister. It was released for publication today.

Citing an editorial of April 30 in the Japan Times and Advertiser, an organ controlled by the Japanese foreign office, in which demilitarization of United States and British bases in the Pacific was proposed as part of a "peace plan," Chiang said this showed the real extent of the dreams of Japanese militarists.

"Nearly four years of Chinese resistance," he declared, "has so exhausted Japan that she is at present powerless to move further towards attainment of her fantastic goal of aggrandizement, and therefore is resorting more and more to bluff, threats, blandishments and all manner of sneaking devices to procure disunity among the peoples of the Pacific and to facilitate the process of gradual absorption."

ARMY in Georgia

The Georgia Department of Agriculture wants Uncle Sam to lay aside can openers and substitute fresh string beans for the packed variety in the Fourth Corps Area.

Menus for the camps were made out when string beans were so scarce and expensive that canned instead of fresh ones were called for. Now, however, Georgia farmers can supply all the fresh beans needed at reasonable figures.

Max L. McRae, director of the Bureau of Markets, left for Washington yesterday to see if he could talk the Army into the shift, which he said would benefit both soldiers and farmers.

He also will try to convince the quartermaster that watermelons, canteloupes and fresh peaches should be used in army camps on a large scale. McRae said he would put in a good word, too, for peanut butter and pecans, believing soldiers would appreciate the later, especially in icecream, cakes and salads.

Georgia farmers were called upon yesterday to submit bids on cabbage, carrots, onions and cucumbers for feeding soldiers at Camp Blanding, Fla. McRae said his office was ready to advise farmers on the bids they could best submit, aid in making out invoices and assist in handling other details involved in delivering produce to the quartermaster depot near Jacksonville.

Hate

There is this man called Hitler—

He won his way to power in Germany by intrigue, trickery and falsehood. This Austrian opportunist shackled the people of Germany by lies and by fear. He killed freedom of thought and freedom of belief and, by synthetic education, brought into existence a generation of German youth that believes the untrue, that worships the vicious and that cannot recognize morality because it has been raised upon immorality.

By inhuman cruelty against helpless racial minorities he inculcated a sadistic love of brutality into his hoodwinked infatuates.

By skillful use of the lie and of subterfuge he lulled to sleep the decent peoples of the world and, while they slept, he pulled into his heartless orbit other, and smaller, nations.

Then, one by one, he attacked, ravaged and seized, without warning, still other weaker nations until the great part of Europe was engulfed in the greedy maw of his ambition for power.

Upon those who resisted he poured death and horror in the form of rending bombs from his planes and he hearkened not to the cries of the injured and the dying, the sobs of motherhood bereft.

He has caused the spilling of more blood than did Genghis Khan, he has wrought more evil in the world than did Attila and all his Huns.

He has shown more depraved viciousness than the Inquisition at its worst and he has brought down upon Europe a new Dark Age of senseless horror.

And, with it all, he has filled uncounted millions of human hearts with hatred, a hatred so intense that if a new, dread plague were to wipe out every living soul in the nation of which he is the titular head, there would be world-wide rejoicing, so great, that the sorrows of the few who understood would be flooded beneath the avalanche of joy.

Regardless of temporary successes, despite the apparent invincibility of his fighting forces, no man can forever survive against the ever-mounting miasma of the hatred of a world which today shrouds the name of Hitler.

Hate is intangible. It is a quality of the mind and of the heart. It creates no tanks and lets loose no material bombs. Yet, of itself alone, it possesses a power that is more dreadful than either. For it is a power capable of smothering into eternal death the spirit of man.

If man could but see, with earthly eyes, the emanations of hate that arise today, hate against Hitler, his Nazis and the dehumanized German youth who serve their foul purposes, he would see a cloud of noxious hatred enveloping the world in a black-out so intense that it darkens the very skies and blinds man to the eternal truths of God's patience and God's love.

Yet, through that miasmic cloud of hate, there shine a few bright lights of hope which tell that man's faith in the eternal truths of the spirit has not been entirely submerged. Westminster Abbey is wrecked by bombs, but the servants of the God who inspired its building walk serenely amid the ruins and plan its restoration when all this nightmare shall have passed into history.

The house of commons is smashed into a smouldering pile of debris but the free government which it personified lives, and shall continue to live as long as there are men with the love of freedom in their hearts.

Some day, all the mounting hate which Hitler has inspired will choke him into ignominious oblivion.

And, after that day, men shall rebuild their shrines to eternal truth, a truth which no earthly force can destroy, a truth which stands sublime and everlasting, untouched by the ravagement of its temporal symbols upon earth.

It was only 20 years or so ago that one had to drop the car to first speed to get over the hill to the poorhouse.

Legislative Sessions

Among the numerous constitutional amendments which Georgians will vote upon on June 3, there is one providing for annual sessions of the state legislature.

To pass this amendment will mean a reversion to a system which was given long trial and which was, only a few years ago, generally branded as undesirable and excessive in cost.

There is a mistaken idea held by many people that biennial sessions result in more extra sessions and are, therefore, more expensive to the state in the long run.

According to records at the state capitol, going back to 1777, Georgia has had, since that date, 120 years under the annual session plan and 46 years under the biennial system. During those years when annual sessions were the custom there were 22 extra sessions, while during the 46 years of biennial sessions, only five extra sessions were called.

Under the present biennial plan, the legislature is in session for 70 days once every two years. The average cost of the legislature is $3,000 a day. The amendment to be voted on on June 3, calls for annual sessions of 50 days each. This means 100 days in two years. Which, at $3,000 a day, amounts to $300,000 in two years.

Whereas the cost of the biennial session of 70 days is $210,000, constituting a saving to the taxpayers of the state, as against the annual sessions proposed, of $90,000 every two years. Which is worth saving.

There is no real need for annual sessions. If a legislature cannot do all that is needed in the way of law-making during a 70-day period every other year, that legislature is either devoid of efficiency or is disrupted by factionalism which will make agreement impossible regardless of how often, or for how long, it meets.

If an emergency arises while the legislature is not in session, the Governor always has the power to call an extra session or, in extreme case, the legislature can itself compel an extra session. With these safeguards there seems no logical ground for a change to annual sessions, while there are at least two good reasons against it. The first is the inevitable disruption and uncertainty in state affairs which exists while the assembly is in session and the second is the simple fact that annual sessions will extract $90,000 additional of the taxpayers' money every two years.

England—Tomorrow

In the living hell that is England today, amid the crash of Nazi bombs and the thunder of collapsing buildings, men are planning the cities that will be England tomorrow. Out of the rubble of destruction there will be built new edifices of which Sir Christopher Wren could scarcely dream.

Some day the antiaircraft guns will be taken from Hyde Park; some day the fighter pilots will put aside their helmets, and silence—a startling silence—will settle over London, and Plymouth, and Coventry, and Liverpool and Glasgow. The silence will last but a few days. The new sounds will not be the drone of a bomber, the scream of bombs, the whining crescendo of the dogfight or the deep roar of ground guns. They will be of the saw, of the riveter, of the concrete mixer, of men at work. This will be the rebirth of England.

Even today in the burrows men are fashioning that new tomorrow, bright with hope. Under the guiding hand of Lord Reith men are blueprinting tomorrow, standardizing in so far as possible for speed and planning production and distribution of material and supplies even as today other men chart the building and shipping of war materials. Not even in this country has the post-war task been so organized.

The bombs are wiping out great sections of England. They are wiping out the crowded and hodge-podge city of London. They are wiping out the old docks and warehouses. They are wiping out the slums and the ornate mansions—and some of the people in both. They are wiping out the heritage of centuries, both good and bad. But they also are creating the dream of a new England, which has known so many dreams and so many realities.

Thus it always is. Men die, but their dreams live. And while men live, they always look to the heavens, not for bombers, but for the rainbow of a brighter day.

Georgia Editors Say:

A YOUTH PROBLEM.

(From The Newnan Herald.)

The annual problem of what is to become of our school children when the close of school releases them into a summer-long vacation is always a keen one. Provision for wholesome activities to fill that vacation time and to prevent an all-too-natural slip into bad habits make an important point for thought among parents. Scouting is one answer to the problem. Today in Newnan the scouting movement has taken good hold and pushed wide roots into the earth. Its natural forerunner, Cub Scouting, is also making good gains, with a strong membership and a waiting list of boys who want to get in as soon as there is a vacancy.

Playgrounds, athletic fields, swimming pools are other answers. All three should be encouraged. But they should be carefully directed, too.

The summer play question is one which no city with a civic conscience should allow her people to forget.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

THE TRUTH ABOUT SHIPPING

WASHINGTON, May 12. The isolationist leaders encourage defeatism and wishful optimism with equal fervor. Recently, running on the second tack, they have seized upon an innocently misleading letter from the chairman of the Maritime Commission, Admiral Emory S. Land, to create the impression that the shipping situation is not serious. The impression is grossly false. For Britain is losing shipping at a rate that will assure ultimate German victory unless this country promptly intervenes.

Assuming the President and the people choose to hold their hands, these are the facts. Britain's merchant fleet will be one-third smaller by the end of this year. Within 60 days vital war materials produced by us for Britain will begin to pile up in large quantities at the docks and in the factory warehouses. And next year, when our output will be sufficient to alter the balance of the war, we shall find ourselves with a vast striking power in our hands, yet with no way to send it against the enemy. If that is allowed to happen, there can be no question that Germany will become the unopposed master of most of the world.

SPENDING CAPITAL The exact figures on the shipping situation are military secrets, but the broad summary above is given on the highest possible authority, and may be accepted as unquestionably reliable. It allows for replacements of tonnage lost, shipping under repair, lease-lending of American vessels to Britain, and all the other modifying factors. In short, it gives an exact measure of the nearness of the hardest decision America has ever had to make.

The danger is not immediate starvation of the British people. Britain started the war with always as many ships as at the beginning of the war. Sinking had been neutralized, gifts of shipping from allies, requisition from enemies and new production. Since the beginning of the year, sinkings have continued at an appalling rate. In the most recent ministry of shipping figure of nearly 500,000 tons lost in April, allowance must be made for the retreat from Greece, yet even so it gives some notion of the true picture. In truth, with a prospective net loss of one-third of her merchant fleet this year, the British people might be close to starvation if it were not for the transfers of shipping recently ordered by the President.

By seizing and lease-lending the German, Italian and Danish vessels, and by taking over much of our own intercoastal shipping for British loss, the President has canceled out much of the net loss for this year. But by giving the British these ships without providing protection for them, the President is merely adopting the oldest and least satisfactory expedient of the improvident—spending capital. Furthermore, he is spending a particularly precious kind of capital. For enough shipping is absolutely essential to the expansion of the war effort that must take place next year if Britain is not to remain permanently on the defensive. Unless protection for ships is quickly changed, Britain will have to continue to submit to the present process of grinding attrition. And there can be only one end to that.

LOOKING AHEAD

The reason for this can be clearly seen in comparative data on British imports. According to a thoroughly dependable estimate, based on confidential information, the tonnage of goods carried to British ports this year will be only 60 per cent of the tonnage imported in 1938. It will be but 75 per cent of the tonnage calculated as the absolute minimum when the war began. And it will be slightly less than the total for 1917. During the first World War, Britain's population was 7 per cent less than today, yet in 1917 the submarine menace brought Britain within a few weeks of starvation and capitulation.

It is easy to see that, if Britain must get through this year with no margin of safety at all, shipping must be supplied from elsewhere to carry America's increasing arms output. Already shipping priorities are being granted to food. By July the stuff will begin to pile up. Next year our entire effort is doomed to be frustrated. For there is nowhere Britain can obtain more shipping except from this country. And the American merchant fleet is not inexhaustible. If we now lose away between two and three million tons of our shipping capital, there will be nowhere to turn next year.

The obvious solution to the situation lies in two measures, both fortunately within the power of this country. First, adequate shipping protection must be quickly afforded. The course of the battle of the Atlantic must be changed without delay. And, second, our present shipping construction program must be radically revised. It now calls for construction of between 1,500,000 and 2,000,000 tons of merchant shipping over a rather long period. Its emphasis is principally on a two-ocean navy which cannot be ready until 1946. Twice as much merchant shipping is needed annually. The job can be done, as was proved at Hog Island in the last war, when the first ship rolled down the ways in the month after the sod was broken and a new ship was finished daily shortly thereafter.

The issue must not be confused by such episodes as that of Admiral Land's letter. It was a reply to a request for information from Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg as to sinkings of ships clearing from United States ports. Since the convoys form at Halifax, only the small group of very fast vessels clear from our ports for the dangerous Atlantic passage. The question was therefore misleading. Admiral Land's figures had to be compiled from newspaper reports. The answer was, therefore, doubly misleading. Meanwhile, the issue remains: Will the job be done, or will it not? Unless the national policy of the last two years is to end in national disaster, the job must be done and done soon.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

Blooms Are Late.

The mountain laurel is late in blooming this spring. Like almost all the flowers and blossoming shrubs.

We went to the mountains on Sunday and found the laurel blossoms but few, if any, opened out in full glory. I expect they'll be fine by next week, if the weather warms a little.

Six of us in our car and a second carload of friends in like number accompanying us on the highway.

We stopped at that place this side of Cornelia, where we believe the best apple cider is to be found. It is a good place to stop.

We ate picnic lunch with scores of old and new friends at Camp Chattooga, inspected the "Y" Camp for Boys—walked until my legs ached—and then went on to Lakemont. Always fascinated by the big lake and the wooded hills that surround it.

We didn't pause at either of the boat houses which are the usual mecca for visitors, but went right on, beyond Press Haven and the former Marist camp—it is now Camp Rabun—until we came to the beautiful CCC camp and "Rabun Beach" just beyond. This is a beach on an inlet of the lake, created by hauling a lot of white sand to simulate an ocean beach. Of course, it doesn't get the twice daily washing by the tides that an ocean beach gets and so, after a couple of years of use, it isn't quite so spotless any more. But it is a pleasant place, with wooden benches, drinking fountain and other equipment for visitors.

There were half a dozen young folks on the wooden pier when we got there, chiefly engaged in photography and diving.

From there, home again, arriving just after dusk.

A grand day, in some grand scenery, with good folks. On Monday morning a little stiffness in aging joints and a slight smarting on the upper forehead where sunburn turned to faint red that portion of the brow from which the hair has somewhat receded.

Sunday Drivers.

I'd be the last to argue that any good folks be debarrd from the use of the highways. And, if a fellow can't afford anything but an old jalopy with a maximum speed of 15 miles per hour, I'd hate to tell him he mustn't take his best girl out for a Sunday ride.

But I noticed, once more, on the Sunday trip, how it is the slowest drivers who create the most hazardous conditions on the roads. Didn't see any accident, as a matter of fact, but four or five times saw what, by a fifth of a second difference in timing, would have been. And each instance was caused by one of these terribly slow drivers.

One of the snails would be creeping along with the inevitable long string of impatient cars held up behind. On those curving roads it is dangerous, at most places, to pass the fellow ahead. Particularly if there are half a dozen fellows ahead, driving almost bumper to bumper. For then, when you pull out of line, you've got to pass not one, but several.

And time and again someone would take the chance, pull out from the end of the line and speed along to the head—and gone—with a curve cutting off vision of approaching traffic. As I said, several of these impatient ones came very close to disaster.

It was, basically, the fault of the slow driver in front.

I can sympathize with the poor soul who can't make more than 20 miles an hour. And you'd be surprised how many of these you find on a nice Sunday. Typical Sunday drivers.

But I've little sympathy for the guy who crawls at less than 25 miles in a new car that you know can go as fast and as smoothly and as safely as any on the road.

In some parts of the country they've established speed minimums, just because of these slow fellows and the congestion and danger they create.

You've got to keep up a minimum of 40 miles an hour if you want to use some of the important highways of the north, east and west. If you can't do this, the highway patrol will send you to the back of the line.

It's not a bad idea. Certainly adds to the convenience and safety of the main highways, anyway.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Is Old Subject.

NEW YORK, May 12.—A vast volume of wordage has been produced in print and in congress on the question of union organization, sometimes inaccurately described as labor's gains, and, in the excitement, most of us have lost sight of the fact that subject dates back before the beginning of the war and is not confined to the problem of national defense. It is terribly true that professional union-busters, some of them common dollar crooks and many of them Muscovite traitors, have impeded the war program, and we know that the damage done in this field has been minimized and misrepresented lest the whole people of the country lose patience with the administration for shielding these saboteurs.

We know that to say that so-and-so many man-hours have been lost may be to conceal the extent of the damage, because if the man-hours are lost in a key operation they will later cause a pile-up in other operations and that the man-hours lost will multiply by 10. These protestations are so plainly political and so transparently false that they shake faith because a government which asks the people to go all-out for defense or war is not honest with the whole people when it excuses and minimizes wrongs done by the agents of a special element. President Roosevelt is supposed to be President of and for the whole United States not merely president of the United States for the AFL and the CIO, and, in this emergency, the labor unions have no moral right to block preparations for defense or war than Bethlehem-Steel.

But the wrong existed before the war, the wrong is written into the Wagner act, which some emotionalist called labor's Magna Charta, and it would still exist even if the Wagner act were repealed. The fundamental wrong lies in the compulsion to join a union which was exercised with wagon spoke and half-brick, with gun and terroristic phone call in the night, long before the Wagner act was passed. No private organization should be permitted to compel American citizens to join its ranks, even though it be perfectly democratic and honest union, as few of them are.

Once Was Illegal.

Before the Wagner act, however, that compulsion was informal and illegal. It rarely was invoked or redressed but, nevertheless, it was illegal according to the laws on the books, but the Wagner act legalized it, the labor board, salted with Communists and other disreputable persons, right men, has helped enforce the compulsion, and the supreme court, under its de facto chief justice, Felix Frankfurter, has given this compulsion amounting to an amplifying law.

So we find, and must accept as a fact of life in the republic, daily infringing the rights of people who think that they are free, a legal requirement that American citizens, under certain conditions, must join private organizations as a condition of their right to earn a living. Wrong though it be, that is the law of the land today.

But we also find that these private organizations are subject to none of the supervision and restraint that govern other private groups. Only the religious bodies enjoy equal immunities, but the people are not compelled to join any church. However, a religious man can be compelled to join an organization whose objectives include the abolition of religion and to contribute of his earnings for that purpose. The Wagner act does not provide for scrutiny of the constitutions of unions by any government agency and the constitutions of the musicians, one of the biggest in the nation, permits the president to suspend the entire document and rule entirely by ear at any time. He can substitute other provisions at will, and he would today insert a provision in favor of atheism, and still every Protestant, Catholic and Jew among the thousands who constitute a great portion of the membership would face the economic death penalty in dissociating himself from an organization hostile to their faith.

No Rules For Honesty.

The fact makes no provisions for honest election, for the regulation and the honest expenditure of dues, taxes and assessments or for admission to unions by qualified workers in a case where the union constitutes a job monopoly. It forbids coercion and oppression of employees by employers, but pointedly and intentionally fails to protect non-union workers from atrocities by union agents, even though it is well known that the official lists of the union are badly infested with criminals and Communists, the latter schooled in the methods of the G. P. U.

These are not all the wrongs against free men which the American government mulishly refuses to discuss, much less admit to redress, at a time when all the people are called upon and most of them fervently desire to be united in an all-out effort to arm for defense or war. They are the more dramatic and tragic in time of peril, but they would be fundamentally wrong at any time. And come peace or war, Americans will not be free until the Wagner act is repudiated down to its original core, which consists only of the right of men to bargain collectively through agents of their own choice.

subcommittee are adopted by the conference."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From the news columns of Wednesday, May 13, 1891:

"Our farmers are thoroughly disheartened," said Mr. James B. Park, Greensboro, yesterday. "If we don't have rain very soon I am afraid there will be no crop."

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

THE FOUR-YEAR TERM I have been reading and listening and as yet haven't heard any sound argument against the constitutional amendment to make the governor's term one of four years.

Indeed, many of those who once were the strongest supporters of this reform, which eliminates the constant running for office on the part of any governor who wishes a second term, seem to be against it merely because Eugene Talmadge is in office and has announced he again will be a candidate if the four-year term is constitutional. There were those who were supporters of the four-year term as long as it was something to talk about. But who deserted once it became a possibility for Georgia.

The four-year term has many things about it to recommend it to the people. It removes the governor from politics in that he will not be forced to begin a campaign soon after election. It provides that he cannot succeed himself. Since he can't succeed himself he will have more courage in dealing with the problems of patronage and "job" business generally. It ought to make for a more efficient administration. It ought to inspire better qualified men to seek the job.

To oppose the four-year term merely because Eugene Talmadge may be the first man to fill it, is not good sense. If the four-year term is a good idea—and few there are who deny it—it is a good idea no matter who the candidate.

The four-year term is a step forward in improving government. The fact that it gives us a governor's race every four years instead of every two is enough recommendation to make it pass.

NO ANNUAL SESSION Legislatures cost money. The legislature of 1935 cost $208,000. The one of 1939 cost $321,000. The session of 1941 will cost more than $300,000 when all its bills are paid.

Among the constitutional amendments to be voted on next month is one which would establish that expense each year instead of every two years.

It is a dangerous proposal and, while not likely to be accepted, nevertheless is too dangerous to ignore. Too little attention has been paid to it. There is no reason for an annual session. The people of Georgia cannot want to spend an additional quarter of a million dollars every two years merely for the pleasure of having the legislature in session.

There is no state emergency requiring annual sessions. The legislature can be called into special session if any emergency does develop. This amendment slid through the legislature without making much noise. It will be on the ballot and voters may be watching for it with a pencil heavy enough to mark it off.

The cost is prohibitive, and in these days, when the state is trying to pay its way out of debt, the additional cost of a $300,000 legislature every year does not fit into the picture. The legislature would be in almost constant session were it to meet every year. And that would be a little too difficult for the public to endure. Even the legislators might get tired of it.

There are but two amendments of any importance. One would make the governor's term a four-year term and would forbid him to succeed himself. Georgians are expected to vote for this one. The other is the proposal to spend an extra $300,000 to bring the legislature to Atlanta every year. This the people are expected to refuse. You may be watching for them early next month.

HOME RULE The ballot for the June election will be the largest in our history, according to those busy preparing it. There are 68 amendments to be voted on.

The majority of them are those dealing with purely local matters and are of interest only to the towns or counties involved. The fact they must be voted on by the state at large is a very convincing illustration of why we need a new constitution, which would clarify the present situation and also would provide for home rule.

There is no reason why the voters of Fulton county should have to pass on a bond issue in some county 300 miles away. This ought to be a simple matter, to give home rule to the counties, but there is not much indication the fight is being won. Home rule would, could, permit shorter sessions of the legislature and should reduce the expenses of that body. It would permit a shorter ballot and one which the voters could follow.

Meanwhile we must do what we can with what we have. Among the 68 there are but two of major importance. One provides a four-year term. Students of government agree it is advisable. The farmer and the businessman surely would approve of getting rid of an election every two years. They surely want their elected executive to have four years in which to serve them and them alone, without having to conduct a political campaign.

And no one can convince me the people want a legislative session every year.

Be thinking it over. And be prepared to vote in June.

Those Who Follow Feel Helpless

If the Guide Seems Unsure

Of the Way

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

The people of America elected Mr. Roosevelt for a third term because they believed he alone was qualified to lead the nation safely through the stormy years that lay ahead.

But now the people who realize the nation's danger are anxious, puzzled, distraught and discouraged for want of leadership. What is the explanation?

The other people—the America First people who "think only of America" and yet cheer every harsh criticism of England and every praise of Germany—these have bold and outspoken leadership to inspire and encourage them. And these well-financed leaders, using the privilege of freedom to defend tyranny, speak so arrogantly and so loudly and with such complete assurance that to people in other lands they seem to represent America.

Meanwhile, the 70 or 80 per cent who would save America by saving England can only answer in private and say to one another in helpless exasperation: "Why does no one speak for our side? Why doesn't some one lead us? Why haven't we a voice of authority to declare our faith and give us hope and courage and assurance that our cause is right?"

Mr. Roosevelt has won fame and glory and power beyond measure by his ability to gauge the feelings and desires of the people. He is justly proud of that ability.

But while it is always politics to "wait until the people catch up"—or to wait and see which way the people are going—that policy often causes a leader to lag behind the people he is supposed to lead. That is what happened in England, and the result was disaster.

The people have made up their minds. Talk with them if you doubt it. They are troubled in spirit only because their leader seems uncertain of his course. They are afraid only of his silence and inaction.

While he waits for public opinion to catch up, the people are asking: "Why doesn't he act?"

He alone is in position to know what action is wise and necessary, but he should not doubt the public's approval of what is necessary.

Dudley Glass

All my life I've been reading eulogies of sunrise. The first break of dawn. And all that.

But I took the writers' words for it. My alarm clock was never set for earlier than 7. Nor did I ever stay up all night for the sake of greeting bright and smiling Aurora when she came over the mountain.

But for several mornings I have found myself wide awake by five and waiting for the break of day. It's nice to pull up a blanket—these mornings have been somewhat chilly out at my house—and just lie there and look out of the window. The window looks over the garden, so there's something to look at—as daylight creeps through the dark.

I'd know it was daylight even if my head was buried beneath the blanket. Because of the birds. There's a catbird who starts his song just as soon as he can see. Maybe he sings by note. I don't know. I never can spot just where he is.

The squirrels, too, stay in bed until dawn. Then they jump from the big poplar to the roof and cross the house to the tall hickory in the back yard and then swing from branch to branch until they get where they are going. They have succeeded in convincing the dog he can't catch them and now they could run square across his nose and I don't think he'd try.

Yes, it's nice to watch the dawn. To see the light coming on so gradually. It's a long time before the sun shows up over the hill. Then it is sho' nuff daylight and time to start thinking about going to work.

O'Keefe's Band

O'Keefe Junior High school's band has won high honors in the national music festival at Richmond, which makes Atlantans mighty proud.

It has been gradually dawning on my consciousness that Atlanta is chock full of these school bands. I've watched them in parades and heard them play. They might not stack up with the late John Philip Sousa's outfit, but what would? They're pretty good.

It is a mystery to me how a teacher or band leader can take a bunch of kids who don't know E-flat from pizzicato and train them to blow into horns and produce music.

As far as I can learn they don't search the woods for musical geniuses. They just pick a boy and a girl and teach them what notes mean on the printed staff and tell them to play 'em. Which they do. Music has always been a deep mystery to me. I love it. I adore it. Perhaps too much. Because I looked on it with such reverence it never entered my mind that I could learn to make it.

Maybe it's not such a miracle, after all. Maybe it's as simple as the multiplication table—which wasn't so darn simple when I tackled the twelves. I wasn't so bad on the tens.

Wish I'd learned to play something when I was a kid. Even a tambourine. Though there wouldn't be much solo-satisfying in a tambourine as a solo instrument.

Brazilian Calls North America 'First Friend'

Visitor Here Says Radio May Make Neighbors Even Closer.

By DUDLEY GLASS.

"North Americans are our first friends—our best friends. I trust that we may grow even closer together—and the radio will help, I am sure."

It was Julio Barata, of Brazil, speaking at the Atlanta airport yesterday. With his pretty wife and Gordan Kern, vice president of the International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation of South America, he was flying from Miami to St. Louis. They had flown from Rio de Janeiro to Miami—27 hours in the air. And enjoyed it hugely.

Barata is director of the radio division of the Department of Information and Press of the government of Brazil. He was on his way to be an honor guest of the National Association of Broadcasters in convention at St. Louis. He had 10 minutes between planes and did not take the usual time out for a sandwich. He said they served excellent luncheon on the planes. Mrs. Barata smiled at that. She did not say anything. I didn't have time to ask if she speaks English. And my Portuguese is a bit rusty.

Speaks Good English.

But Barata speaks excellent English. Slowly and carefully, but distinctly.

"He could not do that two months ago," said Kern, an American, who helped along as interpreter—for me. For I understood Barata's English much better than he did my Georgian.

"No, the Brazilian government does not own and control radio, as the British do," explained Barata. "But we exercise a certain censorship over it. Much like your federal commission. But there is no severe censorship."

"We hear a great deal of American radio programs—music and such. By short wave. And part of my mission is to arrange for more."

"By next year we shall have four short-wave stations in Brazil. One in Rio de Janeiro, one in Sao Paulo, one at Belo Horizonte."

Aims at New York Broadcasts.

"After the St. Louis convention we shall go to New York, where I hope to arrange for frequent broadcasts with NBC, CBS and Mutual."

"Our people love American music and American literature. And, believe me, please, we have the most affectionate regard for the American nation and the American people."

Barata declined to be drawn into a discussion of German influence in Brazil. Besides, the announcer was a crying "All aboard" for the plane to St. Louis. Barata said he thought it "very nice" that The Constitution should send a man out to interview him and a photographer to take his picture. And Mrs. Barata smiled again and shook hands.

DeKalb Guard Atlanta Smoke Held in Death Studies Begun Of Prisoner By Committee

Roy Rice Faces Charge After Accusation by Coroner.

Roy Rice, guard at the DeKalb county public works camp, was being held without bond yesterday following his arrest as the result of the slaying of a Negro convict Saturday night.

A coroner's jury ruled that the Negro, Lester Broughton, 30, came to his death "from a pistol wound in the head inflicted by Rice with intent to kill."

Witnesses said the shooting occurred after a row over a delay in serving supper to the guards Saturday night.

Broughton was sent to the camp in December to serve a two-year sentence for burglary.

'Vastly Improved Conditions' Promised at Completion of Surveys.

Engineering experts of the Coal Producers Committee for Smoke Abatement arrived in Atlanta yesterday to begin a detailed study of the origin of Atlanta's smoke nuisance and promised that when their studies are completed, they will form the foundation for "vastly improved conditions."

Carroll F. Hardy, fuel engineer, heads the five-man committee of engineers, brought to Atlanta by Jack Vogele, field representative for the organization. They visited Mayor LeCraw and were promised every co-operation.

Other engineers in the group are William Mittendorf, who is author of practically all smoke legislation now in force in the city of Cincinnati, and who was a pioneer in smoke abatement work 30 years ago; H. V. Mansfield, W. C. Holt and Minott Brooke. Charles F. Farrar, executive secretary of the Atlanta Coal Merchants Credit Association; F. W. Douglas, of the city smoke abatement board, and William E. Tidmore, local bureau director, accompanied the group to the city hall.

One of the first acts of the surveyors was to obtain from the city smoke abatement bureau a list of complaints filed at the city hall for the purpose of following them up with corrective suggestions.

Nearly Half of Greek Navy Sunk, Say Nazis

NEW YORK, May 12. (AP)—The German radio said today it had been established definitely that Greek naval losses included one cruiser, three destroyers and seven torpedo boats.

At the outbreak of the war, it said, the Greek navy had 20 cruisers, 10 destroyers and 13 torpedo boats.

Good Morning

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

In 1891 the Southern Baptist Convention met in Birmingham, and the feature of the convention that year was the founding of the Sunday school board. The convention meets this week in Birmingham for its 1941 session, and the feature of the convention this year will be the celebration of the golden anniversary of the Sunday school board.

Dr. P. E. Burroughs, educational secretary of the board, has written a book, published by the Broadman Press, which is the trade name of the publishing division of the board, in which he recounts the history of this remarkable agency of Southern Baptists. It is a magnificent piece of work, copiously illustrated, in the opening chapter, Dr. Burroughs employs a phrase which I believe very fairly and finely interprets the ministry of the Sunday school board. He says:

"The Sunday School Board is a vast organization, but it is more; it is a thing of life. As such it comes as such to the world. It breathes, it lives, it suffers, it serves."

"It is a thing of life." That is the phrase which fascinates me the more I think of it. Having been rather closely associated with the work of the board for the past quarter of a century, I find in that phrase the best statement of what the Sunday School Board means to the more than 5,000,000 white Baptists of the south.

Dr. John L. Hill, book editor of the Broadman Press, in his foreword to the book, says:

"Fifty years is not such a long period relatively speaking; but many things of tremendous importance can take place within that time. To capture from the details, the official resolutions and

Safe Burglary Cleared Up by DeKalb Police

Two Youths Confess to Series of Puzzling, Bold Thefts.

A recent series of unsolved burglaries in Fulton and DeKalb counties, including the theft of a 400-pound safe from the home of Fulton Policeman Jesse Anderson and burglaries at several DeKalb schools, appeared cleared up yesterday with the arrest of two youths who allegedly admitted the thefts, DeKalb police reported.

They were listed as James Wesley Ginn, 20, 1019 West Peachtree, and Frank Valentine, 16, 658 Hugh street, S. W.

The boys admitted they had taken Anderson's safe and called him up later to obtain the combination, police said. When they could not unlock the safe, they broke it open with a sledge hammer, took $40 in money and approximately $500 worth of jewelry, two pistols and a shotgun, and threw the safe in the Chattahoochee river, police reported.

DeKalb Police Chief J. T. Dailey said they also admitted entering several homes and the theft of two automobiles.

Valentine was arrested in Garney, S. C., in a car said to have been stolen from Charles L. Davidson, of Lithonia. Ginn was arrested late Saturday night by DeKalb Policemen Johnny Jones and Dewitt Wingo and Fulton Policeman Jerry Austin at Ginn's home.

Police said they recovered a quantity of clothing, cameras, rifles, pistols, radios, watches and jewelry from the boys' homes, and that it would be returned to the owners when properly identified.

ITALO-JEWISH TREATY PROPHESIED BY JUNE.

Editor, Constitution: On June 3, 1941, Mussolini will enter into an agreement with the Jews in Palestine, which will somehow purport to continue in effect until April 27, 1948.

It is of extreme importance that this agreement be publicized as soon as possible after its consummation, and that its contents be made known quickly as they can be ascertained.

This agreement was foretold by the prophet, Daniel, more than 500 years before Christ. The fulfillment of this prophecy is of extreme interest to hundreds of thousands of Christians in Georgia, since it proves a fixed date from which the time of the occurrence of many other ensuing Biblical events can be calculated.

SAYS COUNCIL ACTION VIOLATES DEMOCRACY

Editor, Constitution:

Perhaps now, more than in a great many years, Mr. Average Man is interested in his government—interested particularly in preserving its character, protecting it from trends that lead away from democracy. If we are vigilant in the lesser matters we shall avoid the greater menaces to our governmental institutions.

The foregoing statement is prefatory to saying that city council action in authorizing an ordinance vesting complete administrative authority in department heads is not in harmony with the underlying principle of democracy, and should be rescinded.

So long as authority is exercised by the agents of the people, who hold their commissions directly from the people, we are safe. Once authority is taken from the hands of men selected directly by the people and delegated to men who are not directly chosen by the people, the virus of the thing spreads and the popular government which is our priceless heritage has been put in jeopardy.

Cliff Cameron To Entertain Early Arrivals

Concert on Solavox To Be 7:30 Feature of Band Festival.

By HAROLD MARTIN.

Early arrivals at Grant field Friday night won't have to sit and twiddle their thumbs waiting for 8 o'clock when the bands roll out and the third annual Greater Atlanta Music Festival—sponsored by The Constitution and free to all, gets under way with a flourish of trumpets and a roll of drums.

For those who get there early there'll be plenty of music from the flickering fingers of that wizard of the keyboard, Cliff Cameron, master performer upon the Solavox. A Solavox being, let us add, a little gadget that hitches onto the keyboard of a piano and makes said piano sound like 26 pipe organs playing in concert.

Mr. Cameron contemplates no heavy stuff. He'll give out instead a medley of popular songs—fine songs for singing, good songs to hear, from 7:30 until 8 o'clock while the crowd is gathering.

It'll be a fine chance to come early and get a seat. It will also be a splendid opportunity to loosen up the pipes, to oil up the vocal chords for the community singing which comes after, interspersed here and there between the marching and the music of 20—count 'em, 20—glittering school bands, and the military maneuvers of six prize-winning military companies in dazzling marching routines.

Everything is in readiness, Frank Drake, The Constitution's manager for the big show, announced yesterday. The bands are in fine fettle, both for their individual performances and for the massed display which will bring them all together in the greatest concordance of sweet sound ever heard in Fulton county.

The 800 little folk of the elementary schools have practiced their costumed folk dances until they can do them with their eyes shut, and the six military drill teams have mastered a series of maneuvers West Point's famous cadet corps would look upon with envy.

To make sure that everybody knows who it is down on the field toodling and thumping, John Fulton, program manager of WGST, will carry on a running play by play account over the stadium loud-speaker system. So there's sure to be no hitches, Ben Ackerman, WGST's sound technician, will keep an unwavering eye and attentive ear upon the loud-speaker equipment.

To assure the show's moving with military precision, Lieutenant Colonel P. S. Woodward, principal of Atlanta Opportunity School, and staff of reserve officers has worked out a schedule so timed there'll be no waits, and no lagging. There'll be something to see, hear or do every minute from 8 to 10:30 o'clock.

WEST FULTON HIGH BAND—This band from West Fulton High school is entering the Greater Atlanta Music Festival for the first time this year. It is directed by J. W. Wiggins and will take part in the events at the Constitution-sponsored third annual music festival at 8 o'clock Friday night at Grant field. The festival is free to the public. A crowd of 30,000 persons is expected to witness the biggest outdoor musical event of the year.

SMILLIE ELEMENTARY BAND—This is one of the youngest bands of the score to parade in the third annual Greater Atlanta Music Festival at Grant field at 8 o'clock Friday night under sponsorship of The Constitution.

Little Jean Michael, a second grade student, is the drum majorette for this outfit, which is directed by Charles Bradley. This is the third year the Smillie Band has taken part in the music festivals at Grant field.

Record Georgia Induction Plan Now All Off

Call for 4,700 Canceled as Authorities Claim Quota Too High.

A record-breaking draft call for 4,700 Georgians to be inducted into the army during June is "all off," it was reported yesterday at Fourth Corps Area headquarters.

Instead of the 2,700 white men and 2,000 Negroes which local boards were advised they must furnish, the state will send only 600 white men and no Negroes to camp, Colonel H. Cliff Hatcher, assistant state director of selective service, said.

The reduction in the size of the June call came when Colonel James Skelton and Major Charles Brockman, of state headquarters, were conferring in Washington with draft authorities as to why Georgia's quota had been out of proportion to the call sent other states.

News of the huge draft quota recently sent local boards in the state scurrying to classify and examine a sufficient number of men.

Paprika Pepper Plants To Be Set at Dublin

DUBLIN, Ga., May 12.—Experimental setting of paprika pepper plants is expected to begin here this week under sponsorship of the Dublin-Laurens Chamber of Commerce in an effort to create an industry new to the United States, according to H. M. Simmons, secretary-manager.

The plants are being furnished by a spice firm.

Most of the world's paprika in years past has been grown in Hungary and Czechoslovakia, Simmons said, and both seed and cultural methods have been closely guarded. With coming of the war, however, some seed were smuggled out of these countries into the United States.

Civil Service Prober Given Capitol Office

Stewart, Huiet Welcome Investigator of Alleged Political Activity.

The State Department of Labor believes in entertaining federal investigators.

Why get your dander up simply because the federal boys may be nosing around to see if you've violated the Hatch act, say the labor officials.

That seemed to be the attitude of the state officials yesterday when L. C. Lawhorn, a representative of the Civil Service Commission in Washington, turned up at the labor department to investigate the reported political activity of J. E. B. Stewart, director of the Bureau of Unemployment Compensation.

Dic Stewart and Labor Commissioner Ben T. Huiet give him the cold shoulder and tell him to get what he wanted the best way he could.

Refuses to Talk.

Absolutely not. They pitched right in and rigged him up an office. Gave him a comfortable chair in which to recline and muse over his findings. Told him they would be glad to fix him up with a telephone, an office boy and maybe a pitcher of ice water. Everything was comfort plus.

Yet in these luxurious surroundings the investigator would not talk to newspapermen and raised a ruckus when a photographer took his picture. He contended any statement would have to come from Washington.

"Yes, sir, we believe in fixing 'em up," commented Stewart. "They'll get real entertainment as long as they stay with us. I understand they're trying to prove I'm a politician, but I already admit that."

Stewart said he thought the investigation was brought out by his announcement that he planned to run for congress against Congressman Robert Ramspeck.

Violation Charged.

Recently the Atlanta Federation of Trades adopted a resolution calling on Governor Talmadge to remove both Huiet and Stewart. The labor group charged Stewart with violation of the Hatch act, which forbids participation in politics by any state employee whose salary is paid in whole or in part by federal funds.

Lawhorn has been conducting his investigation for approximately two weeks, but yesterday was the first time he had appeared at the labor department.

After the photographer took his picture he admonished newspapermen: "Don't print my picture or I'll be fired." When Huiet asked him if the investigation centered about Huiet he was quoted as saying, "It might be."

Vets Hear Talks On War Methods

American officers who fought in the first World War heard yesterday what it was like to face the mechanized might of German forces during the second conflict in ravaged France.

Miss Anna McLester, native Georgian who had lived in France for many years after serving overseas in 1918 with an American Ambulance Unit, yesterday told members of the Military Order of the World War of life in France when Germans came.

Telling purely a personal story, full of human interest, Miss McLester described the suffering of the French people in soul and body, since their country has fallen.

Lieutenant Roger Harlepp, teacher of French at Emory who commanded a French anti-aircraft unit in the battle of France, told of his experiences battling panzer divisions with troops inadequately armed, and seemingly apathetic in the face of the foe.

ACW Voted Voice At Cluett-Peabody

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America (CWO) officially became the bargaining agent for five Cluett-Peabody shirt manufacturing plants yesterday with the announcement by the National Labor Relations Board that it had polled 385 votes as compared to 345 votes carried by the United Garmen Workers of the AFL.

The election was held at the plants Thursday under NLRB supervision, and Regional Director Charles N. Feidelson revealed the tabulations yesterday. Two workers voted for no union.

The A. C. W. called a strike at the plants on February 17, but two weeks later signed a bargaining contract with Cluett-Peabody. Then the U. G. W. walked out. A hearing March 13 held by the Labor Board resulted in the election.

WON'T TALK—L. C. Lawhorn, representative of the Civil Service Commission in Washington, found real southern hospitality in the labor department yesterday. Here to investigate alleged violations of the Hatch act, he was given an office by labor officials. He would not talk, and objected to having his picture made.

Regents Balk At WGST Sale, Order Changes

After declining to sell state-owned radio station WGST, the State Board of Regents yesterday ordered that Georgia Tech be given more direct supervision and control over the policies and programs of the station.

Vice Chairman E. Ormonde Hunter, of Savannah, explained the federal government had asked that this be done and added Chairman Beaver, Attorney General Ellis Arnall and Chancellor S. V. Sanford would go to Washington to seek approval by the Federal Communications Commission.

The resolution, as adopted by the board, ordered that "the present contract be amended to give Georgia Tech direct supervision and control of policy and program, the contract as amended to be approved by the attorney general." This action of the board was taken in executive session.

The station is now leased to the Southern Broadcasting Company. A group of Atlanta businessmen had tentatively offered to buy it, but Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Georgia Tech, opposed sale of the station, pointing out it brought in about $28,000 a year for the school. The station was presented to Tech by the late Clark Howell Sr., publisher of The Constitution.

Members of the board approved an agreement for leasing property adjoining the South Georgia College, at Douglas, to the city of Douglas for an airport, to be used in defense training. The agreement specified payment of $1 a year.

The board postponed action on a proposal to purchase approximately 4,000 acres of cut-over land near the Coast Plains Experiment station, at Tifton, for a forestry and livestock project. The federal government appropriates $25,000 annually for this work.

There was opposition to purchase of this much land, and a special committee was authorized to determine if the federal allotment could be safeguarded with a smaller purchase.

Regent John J. Cummings, of Donaldsonville, who has been making a detailed study of agricultural activities carried on by the regents, recommended that the state extension service be supervised by the dean of the state agricultural college. The two now are separate.

Chairman Beaver pointed out that a survey was now under way to determine whether this was feasible.

Cummings also criticized part of the program being carried on at the experiment stations, pointing out he was in favor of their doing less work and doing it more thoroughly. He said the station at Griffin was losing money on cattle by having too many breeds.

Chancellor Sanford read a lengthy decision by Regent Lucien P. Goodrich, of Griffin, declaring that the board had authority to set up regulations controlling the attendance of out-of-state students at state institutions. The decision will be submitted to Attorney General Ellis Arnall for his concurrence or disapproval.

Talmadge's Gift Bull Hurts Page

Just how desirable is the favor of Governor Talmadge was a question yesterday with "Jim" Page, the well-known manager of the Henry Grady hotel, as he limped about his quarters.

For "Gene," a youthful registered Hereford bull presented Page by his excellency, "Gene" Talmadge, did his owner wrong Sunday.

City Studies Office Space Need at Field

$6,500 Sought To Add Floor to Building for CAA Use.

Mayor LeCraw and city administration leaders yesterday began a study of finances for the purpose of attempting to meet demands of the Civil Aeronautics Administration that the municipality provide about $6,500 to add a third floor to the CAA building under construction at the municipal airport.

Jack Gray, manager of the airport, and B. Graham West, city comptroller, were closeted with LeCraw in the conference, during which it developed that CAA is convinced that the $50,000 structure nearing completion is inadequate.

CAA has agreed to rent the structure now being erected for $5,000 a year and through R. C. Copeland, regional manager, promised that the third story would be rented on the same pro rata basis.

The city provided $18,000 of the $50,000 cost of the original structure, and it is anticipated that $6,500 will be required of the city for the addition which would provide about 4,000 square feet of added floor space.

Soldiers Clash With Pickets At White House

Marines Also Take Part; Two Are Arrested.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(P)—A clash between what police said was soldiers and Marines off duty and a group picketing the White House occurred tonight.

Police who were called to Pennsylvania avenue in front of the White House brought one soldier and Marine back to headquarters and said a picket had been sent to a hospital for treatment of minor injuries.

Placards carried by the pickets identified the demonstration as that of the American Peace Mobilization.

Earlier in the evening the organization announced it had conducted a "perpetual peace vigil" in front of the White House for 75 hours. The marchers had carried a "torch of freedom" and placards which read "Save Democracy for Peace" and "Jim Crow Is Not Democracy."

Police Lieutenant George Walrod said that a group of "seven or eight soldiers and Marines" came upon the marchers and "tried to break up the picket line."

One of the marchers was struck in the face by a belt buckle, Walrod said, and was taken to a hospital for treatment.

Mrs. Equen To Be Honored At Gainesville Flower Show

By SALLY FORTH.

♦ ♦ ♦ MAY IS TRULY the month of flowers, and with its advancement numerous events of horticultural interest loom on each day's horizon, both locally and in other places. And, as president of the Garden Club of Georgia, Ann Hart (Mrs. Murdock) Equen finds her presence at these affairs in constant demand. Ann, however, takes keen enjoyment in these activities and is always on hand whenever possible. So it was with a great deal of pleasure that she accepted the invitation of the Gainesville Garden Club Council to be honor guest at the opening of the annual flower show to be sponsored tomorrow and Thursday in the Gainesville High school auditorium.

One of the highlights of the spring season in garden club circles, the council has secured for the judges a group of prominent Atlantans, including Edith Shepherd (Mrs. James) Henderson, Sally Broadnax (Mrs. Granger) Hansell, Donald and Louise Hastings, Mrs. Grady Poole and Charles Hudson Jr. Completing the list of judges will be Frances Talmadge and Mrs. J. C. Hart, of Athens.

The proceeds from the show will be used for the benefit of the British War Relief Society, according to Mrs. Will Albert Roberts Jr., the general chairman, and Mrs. Leslie F. Quinlan, president of the council. The 10 garden clubs in Gainesville, as well as other special groups, will have exhibits at the event, which will be open at 10:30 o'clock each morning, closing at 10 o'clock both evenings.

Visitors from all over the state are expected to attend the show, which will draw approximately 500 flower-lovers, if past registrations are any indication!

Here in Atlanta, admirers of the rose, "the queen of flowers," will receive a memorable thrill at the annual rose show to be sponsored today by the Druid Hills Garden Club at the Biltmore hotel.

This year the club plans something different in the way of awards. Two prizes, one a check for $5 and the other a handsome silver trophy, will be given the blue ribbon winners in the artistic arrangements class. The check will be given to the club in whose name the arrangement is entered, and the trophy will be received by the individual member of the club responsible for the actual arrangement, and will be kept in her possession until next year when it will be passed on to the next winner.

This club, as you may be aware, sponsored the very first rose show ever held in Atlanta, and its rose garden and memorial fountain in Druid Hills are combined in one of the city's loveliest beautification projects. Mrs. Joseph C. Read is the capable president of the club, which is one of the most enterprising in the state.

It is this month, too, when garden club members all over the country have their attention focused on the twenty-eighth annual meeting of the Garden Club of America, which will convene in Rochester, N. Y., May 20-22, at which time new officers will be elected.

The Peachtree Garden Club,

tine meeting here, she will take the entire club to Cartersville. There Mrs. Ashcraft has planned a meeting and luncheon at the handsome home of her mother, Mrs. Madison Bell. Weather permitting, the group will assemble for luncheon in the gardens of Mrs. Bell's home, which is one of the show places of that section.

♦ ♦ ♦ LITTLE LOUISE Mandeville invited a number of small children to help celebrate her seventh birthday recently at her Twenty-eighth street home. The children were enjoying themselves immensely on the lawn under the spreading trees, and Leon Mandeville was taking moving pictures of them when the raindrops descended and they were forced to run into the house.

The original and capable Ellen Newell Bryan assumed charge of the group at this juncture and played many amusing games with the children. Prizes were awarded the winners and judges were Mrs. William Wardlaw, Mrs. Charles Nunnally and Mrs. Leon Mandeville Sr., the latter being paternal grandmother of little Louise.

In the midst of the fun and frolicking, the Cheer Wagon appeared in the driveway and the children rushed to the windows to see the excitement. Ice cream was served from the wagon on red, white and blue paper plates. Tiny American flags waved from the top of each plate of ice cream. The patriotic note was reflected on the birthday cake which was decorated with seven red and white candles and blue stars.

In the "make funny faces" contest the prize was awarded to Londa Bicknell, who rivaled Cass Daley, of New York stage and night club fame, who was in Atlanta recently. Ellen Bryan conducted the contest and Londa's ludicrous imitations convulsed her audience.

Miss Mary Lane, Savannah, Weds Dr. Howard Morrison

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 12.—Enlisting the interest of society over the state is the announcement made by Mr. and Mrs. Mills Bee Lane of the marriage of their daughter, Miss Mary Lane, to Dr. Howard Jackson Morrison, which was solemnized at a quiet ceremony taking place at 8 o'clock Saturday evening in the chapel of St. Paul's Episcopal church. Rev. Ernest Risley, rector of St. John's Episcopal church, officiated in the presence of only members of the families.

The chapel was beautified with Easter lilies and was lighted entirely by candlelight.

The bride entered with her father, who gave her in marriage, and the groom's best man was his brother, Joseph V. Morrison, of Atlanta.

The lovely bride wore a hoop-skirted wedding gown of white satin, featuring a front panel, embroidered in seed pearls in an exquisite design of lilies of the valley. The fitted bodice was embroidered in seed pearls in the same design and featured a low waistline, a square neck and bracelet sleeves.

The bride's long tulle veil fell to the end of the train and was held to her head by a tiara of tulle and seed pearls in a flower design. Her bouquet was a nosegay of white orchids and stephanotis, showered with lilies of the valley. Following the ceremony a large reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lane, on East Gaston street. The house was beautifully decorated with quantities of peonies and white lilies.

Mrs. Lane, the bride's mother, was gowned in blue chiffon. Mrs. A. A. Morrison Sr., mother of the groom, wore orchid chiffon. Later in the evening Dr. and Mrs. Morrison left for a wedding trip.

Spaghetti with French fried tuna offers new taste appeal.

Tasty Main Dishes Require Little Time

By Sally Saver.

In order to spend long hours in the garden, at bridge or luncheon or just being out of doors, there must be dinner dishes that can be prepared in advance or in a few minutes just before the dinner hour. Spaghetti and macaroni, particularly the cans of cooked spaghetti and macaroni which you'll find on the grocer's shelf are splendid aids for quick meals. The picture shows a savory dish which can be ready on short order, using canned cooked spaghetti. Make it this way: Drain 1 small can (7 oz.) tuna fish and rinse quickly with hot water. Break into pieces about 1 inch square. Beat 1 egg well, then add 1-3 cup milk, 1-2 cup sifted flour and 1-4 teaspoon salt. Beat until smooth, then dip pieces of tuna in this batter. Fry them in hot deep fat. Meanwhile, heat a large can of cooked spaghetti thoroughly, and serve on hot platter, with fried tuna surrounding. Serves 4.

Another variation of canned spaghetti is this: Drain 1 small can sliced mushrooms (or use fresh mushrooms) and saute in 2 tablespoons butter or margarine. Add 1 large can cooked spaghetti, 2 small cans deviled ham and 4 tablespoons liquor drained from the mushrooms, or milk or water. Heat thoroughly and serve. Serves 4 to 6.

Questions about foods, cooking and serving will be answered by Sally Saver. Write or phone The Constitution, or Walnut 6565.

POINTS FOR PARENTS

By Edyth Thomas Wallace.

This
Mother: "I always thought I'd enjoy having children but I didn't half realize what good times we could have together... Which story shall we read now?"

Not This
Mother: "It's all right for you to talk about how much you enjoy the children, grandma. You don't have the job of making them behave."

When parents become so overwhelmed with the responsibility of rearing their children they cannot enjoy them, it is time to analyze the cause of such a condition.

Girl Who Put Off Marriage Finds Boy Drifting Away

By Dixie George.

Dear Dixie: I have been going with a boy for four years. We confessed our love for each other and he asked me to marry him. I could not answer yes because we had to wait for financial matters. We planned to in the future. We continued going together.

Suddenly we began drifting apart and I haven't seen him for five months. He writes me and says he still means it to be some day if I will still have him. I know I am foolish to believe he cares for me, and I think if he does he would show it, don't you?

When I date other boys, which I prefer not to, I am always thinking about him and I do not enjoy myself and I know they do not enjoy being with me. When I am at work I dream of him. Can't you help me settle this, for it makes me so unhappy. Can't you suggest something? E. M.

Dear E. M.: In the first place you should have accepted him when he asked you to marry him last June. He was as well aware of the financial situation as you were, and if he wanted to risk it, you should have also, and let it be a fifty-fifty proposition. When he writes and says he means for you two to marry some day, what makes you doubt him? From what you tell me, I think he has a right to doubt you. Write him that you still care for him, that you will still accept him, and to come to see you. If he doesn't come after that, and if he doesn't make some plans for the wedding, then he didn't mean it in the first place. If you love him and want to marry him, it is your move.

CHURCH DATES SHOULD NOT CAUSE GOSSIP

Dear Dixie: Do you think I should go to my boy friend's church every Sunday night? I have been going with this boy for some time and he wants me to go with him every Sunday night. He is a church worker and I hate to drag him away to my church. My mother thinks we should go to my church some as she thinks people will talk if I go to his church every Sunday night. Should I go to his church or not? He is a Baptist and I am Methodist. H. G.

I think if your friend is a church worker and wants to go to church every Sunday night it will be all right for you to go with him, provided you take him to some of the morning services at your church. The church attendance certainly should be divided. Have you ever asked him to go to your church with you? I think if he is such an ardent church worker that he will be perfectly willing to go with you some time. As for being talked about going to his church I would not let that worry me. It certainly would be harmless talk.

Bob Chipman Holds Barons to Four Hits as Crackers Win, 7-0

All in the Game

BY JACK TROY

Dry Land Sailors Lieutenant Commander John Jay Schieffelin, who was No. 4 oar on the championship Yale crew of '19, was bidding adieu to a group of graduates of the naval air training base at Old Camp Gordon.

"Are you going ashore permanently?" he asked. They exchanged further pleasantries and the graduates drove off to a naval school of higher learning.

Pop Hines, city editor of The Constitution, wanted to know if he had heard him correctly about going "ashore."

"Oh, yes," responded Lieutenant Commander Schieffelin, Eli Yale '20, "and now if we're all here, let's go aboard and see the captain."

So we went "aboard" in a vast expanse of Georgia red clay and we "hit the deck," had "chow" with the captain, and studiously avoided the brig.

It was a great day for Eli Yale Roby Robinson, national advertising manager of The Constitution. Robinson was almost at the point, once, of accepting Lieutenant Commander Schieffelin's offer of a 30-day student training course. (Editor's note: Those Eli Yales are persuasive, even one to the other.)

Robinson backed out when he learned that there are two compulsory calisthenics periods daily, and that they follow a pattern laid out by former Heavyweight Champion Gene Tunney.

One look at the shad-like middle of Lieutenant Commander Schieffelin, who gives the calisthenics, was proof enough of their exactness.

Anyway, when we had concluded a four of the air training base we had a pretty good feeling about securing democracy for America.

Those R. F. D. boys who make up the majority of trainees out at old Camp Gordon impress you with their intelligence and snappy appearance in the drills and at the controls of the training planes.

It was a profitable experience for such dry land sailors as Pop Hines, Roby Robinson, Bill Key and yours truly. Somehow we all felt good about things as we went "ashore."

Uses His Head There have been a couple of baseball who used their heads for something besides a hat rack, as the saying goes.

Personally, I was familiar with the fact that soccer players frequently make assists with their noggin, literally speaking, but I'd always had the quaint idea that baseball players wore a glove for reasons other than keeping the right or left hand warm, as the case might be.

J. B. Young, of the U. S. Veterans' Administration, writes about a most unusual play he saw in the Texas League, involving a pitcher who "used" his head, and also includes an odd play related by Jimmy Evans, president of the "N" men's club of Northwestern University.

Mr. Young writes—

"The play I saw concerned Pitcher Bill Buscha, throwing for Houston against the St. Louis Browns in an exhibition game. Bill was one of those short, stocky, 'beetle-browed' fellows with nothing but a high hard one and plenty of hope. He made the mistake of trying to throw one by Johnnie Lavan in the clinches; man on third, one down, score tied two all.

"Johnnie drove the pitch straight back at Buscha and the ball hit him squarely between the eyes, then rebounded to the catcher, Jess Wright, who caught the ball in the air and flipped it to third to catch the runner who had left there on what looked to be a sure hit through the middle. It was scored as a double play—pitcher to catcher to third.

"More power to you and the Crackers.

"Yours truly,

"J. B. YOUNG."

Jimmy Evans follows up with this oddity:

"There have been a number of cases in which the ball BOUNCED back to the catcher and led to double plays. The Philadelphia hurler, Syl Johnson, figured in similar freak situations. He has been hit on the head two times, each time by the same hitter, and in each case the catcher tagged the runner who was coming in from third, and the runner in both cases was the same man."

Is That So? I don't get it. Wirt Gammon writes in his Chattanooga column that "The Times correspondent in Little Rock said Chattanooga was the best team that has shown there this season."

Is it just barely possible The Times correspondent was out of town when the Crackers played there recently? When the Crackers left Little Rock there

Bergmann and Marshall Bang Out Home Runs

Emil Mailho Returns to Lineup and Opens With 2-Bagger.

BY JACK TROY.

Constitution Sports Editor. Bob Chipman, the famous convalescent, got well at the expense of those Birmingham Barons last night as he turned in the Crackers' second consecutive shutout. The score was 7 to 0.

Consistent as the night was long, Chipman fanned seven and struck out four times himself.

Extremely staid, Chipman allowed the Barons but four hits and once subjected them to the humiliation of having the bases loaded with none out and then slamming the door.

With Chipman working so handsomely, his mates were in tunes with him. It was a night of robust clouting and brought forth a trio of Barons pitchers.

Actually, the Crackers got only seven hits, of this total, however, there were two home runs, a triple and two doubles. There also was a 365-foot out. Connie Ryan hit a terrific line drive up the left-field line and Mele made the catch just in front of the stands.

Russ (Joe College) Bergmann belted an inside-the-park homer with one on, while Willard Marshall socked his with the bases unoccupied. Charley Glock connected for a country triple which hit a sign next to the scoreboard in center field.

Peter Naktens started for the Barons, Harriet relieved and Paul Gehrmann finished.

Emil Mailho returned to the line-up after a trip to California to attend the funeral of his mother and scored the first run after hitting a double in the first inning.

Pete Thomassie, who subbed capably for Mailho, coached at third base.

Manager Paul Richards filled in at first base, with Lester Burge forced to the sidelines because of a thumb injury. He hurt the thumb while he broke last year and probably will be out of action for several days.

Last night's was the Crackers' 26th win in 31 starts and their second shutout in a row. They seem to be off on another winning streak.

The teams will observe an off-day today, ending the series in a Ladies' Night game Wednesday. Most unusual sight was overcoat wearers in mid-May. The unseasonable cold held down the crowd to around 3,000.

MAILHO DOUBLES.

Mailho, back in the lineup after a week's absence, doubled and scored on Marshall's single as the Crackers grabbed a first-inning lead.

In the second inning, Ferrara walked and Bergmann hit a homer inside the park. The ball rolled to the scoreboard, 462 feet from home plate.

Richards led off the fourth with a double and went to third on Ferrara's infield out. Richards scored on a delayed steal and Bergmann was run down in the chase.

Marshall teed off in the sixth, belting a homer over the second tier of signs to increase the Crackers' advantage to five runs.

In the seventh, with Bates and Ryan on base and two out, Glock tripled to the laundry sign in center. The blow came off Gehrmann, third Barons pitcher.

The Barons had only one scoring chance in the whole ball game. They loaded the bases with none out in the second, but a runner was forced at the plate and a strikeout and ground-out followed.

COOKIE GOES FOR A RIDE—After booting Klein's grounder in the eighth, Cookie Lavagetto (5), Dodgers' third baseman, tried to cut off the Phils' catcher, Mickey Livingston, who slid in safely between Lavagetto's legs. The players including the Dodgers' catcher, Mickey Owen (10), who backed up the play, are looking for the throw-in which was late. The Dodgers defeated the Phils, 6-5, in their game Sunday.

Softball Federation Adds New Team

Membership of the Atlanta Softball Federation was increased to 12 teams last night with the entry of Bob Blackwell's Blackwell & Davis club in the City League.

The Class B Atlantic League was reduced to a six-team loop. H. D. McLean's America, Fore and Sinclair Refining, former members, were moved up into the City League, where they will compete with Manager B. Knowles' Stockbridge crew, Sylvan Hills, Walthour & Hood and Blackwell & Davis.

The Atlanta League's roster now consists of teams from Southern Dairies, Aristocrat Dairies, Atlanta Woolen Mills, Fancy Brothers, United States Rubber and Pistol Class. This lineup gives the federation two well-balanced leagues. The teams will play exclusively in Walthour Field, Mondays through Friday.

Stockbridge vs. Sylvan Hills at 8 o'clock. Pistol Class vs. United States Rubber at 9:15 o'clock.

WEDNESDAY NIGHT. Walthour & Hood vs. Blackwell & Davis at 8 o'clock. Southern Dairies vs. Aristocrat Dairies at 9:15 o'clock.

THE AMERICAN NAVY

War Against Tripoli Taught Advantage Of Fighting in Enemy's Home Waters

Within weeks—perhaps days—the United States Navy will be ordered to deliver the goods to embattled Britain.

What is this Navy?

What were its beginnings and how was it built?

What of the men who man the ships?

This is the second of a series of articles in which will be told the story of America's growth in naval strength from the days of the Revolution to today, when the Navy represents the sum total of all the skill of American artisans and mechanical geniuses.

By WILLIAM G. KEY.

The poverty of a new country wiped out the Navy list. But it did not wipe out the need for war vessels, and the lack soon was seriously affecting the whole eastern seaboard. Without force to arm the diplomats, Britain could not be held to the peace terms of 1783, Spain kept the lower reaches of the Mississippi closed to American vessels and merchantmen on the wide oceans were exposed to the piracy of the Barbary corsairs and, later, to seizure by belligerents in the War of the French Revolution.

The illusion of isolation was patent even in these early years of the republic. Thomas Jefferson, who in theory, favored abandoning of the oceans and the building of a nation on an agrarian foundation, found that "we are not free to decide this question on principles of theory only." John Rutledge, speaking for ratification of the Constitution before the South Carolina legislature, contended that "we must hold our country by courtesy, unless we have a navy." It was only after a bitter struggle with those who feared that a navy meant aggression by other lands, or imperial designs on the part of this country, and those who begrudged the cost, that the Navy as we know it today was begun.

Two-Vote Victory.

In the year 1794, by a bare two votes, congress authorized the construction of six frigates to meet the threat of the Barbary pirates. The sense of congress was that merchantmen should be purchased and converted, just as was done in the case of the short-lived Navy of the Revolution. But the administration—Washington's—decided upon construction of the new ships of the finest material available—live oak and red cedar, to give them "such qualities of strength, durability, swiftness of sailing, and force, as to render them equal, if not superior, to any frigates belonging to any of the European powers." Thus these vessels, authorized for use against the pirates, openly were built by the administration then in power to match the best navies of Europe, if not in weight, in quality.

None of these vessels had been completed when the first "Sailor President," John Adams, took office in 1797. Bitter fights in congress had held up funds needed to complete them. But under Adams the money was quickly voted by heavy Federalist majorities, the Navy Department was founded and the nation launched into the undeclared naval war with France.

First of the 1794 class of ships to take the seas was the U. S. S. Constellation, still on the Navy list and afloat at the Newport, R. I., naval training station. Another was the U. S. S. Constitution, known to every school child. Yet another was the U. S. S. President, a sister ship of the Constitution, and while less known, in that day the finest ship of its class afloat.

Most Feared Afloat.

These frigates, mounting 44 guns and fastest vessels of their kind, wrote one of the finest chapters of any navy on any sea. They were the most feared ships afloat, manned by officers and seamen unafraid of the devil himself. They could outlast or outfight anything then roaming the seas. For three years they ranged the high seas to harry the French fleet wherever they would meet in equal and sometimes even unequal combat. The Constellation captured the French frigate Insurgente off the West Indies in 1799 and in 1800 drove into flight the heavier-gunned French ship Vengeance, although her rigging and superstructure had virtually been shot off. The live oak and red cedar were as strong as armor plate against the weapons of that day. These great ships and others hastily built and armed kept the seas open for the intrepid mariners of New England.

The quasi-war with France ended in 1800. With Jefferson now President of the United States and converted from his earlier recognition of the need of sea power, the Navy fell upon evil days again, just as it has all through the history of this country after being built up to an adequate level. The young Navy was stripped ruthlessly. Ships were sold, still others were laid up. At one time, Albert Gallatin, Jefferson's secretary of the Navy, toyed with the idea of constructing a huge covered dock at Washington in which the entire remaining Navy would be laid up, high and dry, to save it from decay and the country from the expense of maintenance!

Fortunately, Jefferson nursed a deep antipathy toward the Barbary corsairs, and the growing demands of Algiers, Tunis, Tripoli and Morocco for tribute galvanized this hatred into action.

Attack for Defense.

In May of 1801, President Jefferson ordered a squadron under command of Captain Richard Dale into the Mediterranean. Dale was astounded to find that the Bay of Tripoli had declared "war" against the United States, but he took the only action a Naval officer could with dignity under the circumstances. His guns bespoke the authority of the United States.

From tough little America came the battle cry, "millions for defense, but not one cent for tribute." A war too fearsome for the great navies of Europe raged for four years in the inland sea, with the great frigates Constitution and Constellation in the vanguard of the bitter struggle. Here for the first time the United States learned a lesson it has repeatedly forgotten in later years, the basic lesson of the decisive advantage of carrying the war away from home waters and seizing command of the home waters of a maritime enemy. It was not until the American Navy attained sufficient power and superiority in numbers to blockade the coasts of Tripoli that the war was carried to a successful conclusion.

Not a few destroyers of the United States fleet bear names that pay tribute to the bravery of American officers and seamen in the first war against the pirates.

Tomorrow: The Navy's Finest Hour.

India Jails Jammed.

Overcrowding in the jails of the United Provinces of India has been eased by placing thousands of prisoners in camp jails established at Lucknow, Sitapur and Benares. The congestion became acute in 1939 as the result of three political movements—the Madhe Sahaba, the Tabarra and the Khaksar agitations. No fewer than 15,000 persons involved in these movements were sent to jail in a year in the United Provinces. In spite of these difficulties the diet, clothing and bedding of prisoners were improved and 29,000 prisoners were taught to read and write.

Army Rules Football.

Willie Thornton, famous British professional football player, had to choose between Football Association and Army orders, and the Army won. He played in the "banned" Army game at Ashyde-la-Zouch, England, for a war charity fund. Four other players also were under regimental orders. Had they bowed to the Football Association's warning not to take part in a Sunday game and failed to turn out they would have been guilty of insubordination as service men.

Handbag Aids Cause.

A handbag made by hereditary court craftsmen for the Empress of Ethiopia and taken to London when her country was taken by the Italians has aided the Red Cross. The Empress gave it to the organization, which sold it to a dealer. In materials alone it is valued at $332, for it contains 18 ounces of the finest gold. Craftsmanship doubled its value, both sides consisting of exquisite gold filigree with mountings of wrought gold symbols.

900 Teachers In State Listed For Placement

Number of Registrants Expected To Be Increased Soon.

Almost 900 school teachers who are unemployed or want a change of assignment in the 1941-42 term have registered with the teacher placement service of the Georgia Department of Labor, Supervisor L. C. Butcher said yesterday.

More applications are expected within the next few weeks, Butcher said, because normally there is a 25 per cent turnover each year among the 22,000 public school teachers in the state.

The placement service is free, both to teachers and to superintendents who desire to fill vacancies, Butcher said. Many of the placements made each spring for the following school year are made through the bureau.

According to Butcher, school teachers are free to apply for an application blank at any branch office of the Georgia State Employment Service. The application includes the teacher's qualifications, credentials and recommendations.

As vacancies occur, superintendents apply to the bureau, outlining their needs. The bureau then makes recommendations upon the basis of applications on hand.

Butcher added that it is not necessary for a teacher to accept a position offered in this manner, but said that the bureau acts as a "clearing house" for unemployed teachers seeking work.

Father of Atlantian Dies In Three-Story Plunge

Haskell Coffin, 60, a New York magazine illustrator and father of Amory Coffin, of 554 Peoples street, was killed yesterday in a three-story plunge from the window of a St. Petersburg, Fla., hotel.

The illustrator was a native of Charleston and had been ill for several months.

Constitution Staff Photo—Marion Johnson.

TURNOVER TIME—This is the season of the year that county school superintendents begin looking for teachers to serve in the 1941-42 term. That is why hundreds of men and women have registered during the past few weeks with the teachers' placement bureau of the Georgia Employment Service. Filing their applications with Director L. C. Butcher are, left to right, Katherine Kennedy, Rene Tuck, Mrs. H. G. Bridges, Louise Hooks, Sue Wardlaw, Cohen Phillips and Marguerite Radford.

Georgia Doctors To Meet in Macon

MACON, Ga., May 12.—(P)—More than 700 doctors from over the state will converge on Macon tomorrow, visiting the cradle of the Medical Association of Georgia for their 92nd annual convention.

The meetings, to open at 2 p. m. with the house of delegates, will continue through Friday and will include public as well as scientific sessions.

The association was organized here March 29, 1849, and the first convention met here in 1859. Meeting with the doctors will be the Woman's Auxiliary, starting Wednesday.

ASCAP Music To Be Heard on WATL Tonight

First Program Under New Contract To Go on Air at 10:05.

The first ASCAP music to be heard over an Atlanta broadcasting station since last December will go on the air at 10:05 o'clock tonight when WATL broadcasts a program by Jan Garber's orchestra.

The program, to be carried out by the Mutual Broadcasting Company, who yesterday signed a contract with the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, will be on the Mutual's coast-to-coast network.

Radio broadcasters' old contract with ASCAP expired last December and none of their music has been carried on the networks since that time.

Mutual is the first network to sign a contract with ASCAP. The other networks, Columbia and the National Broadcasting Company, are now conferring with officials of ASCAP.

War Diversion Of Aluminum By 1942 Seen

Second Reduction in Auto Production Considered Possible.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(P)—The bill empowering President Roosevelt to take over foreign ships in American ports and use them in the defense or aid-to-Britain program was approved without major changes today by the Senate Commerce Committee. Meanwhile, as officials worked on other aspects of the defense and plans, it became apparent that many sacrifices by American consumers were in prospect.

For one thing, William L. Batt, of the Office of Production Management, forecast that the nation's entire aluminum supply would be devoted to military needs by 1942. Other defense officials said that a second 20 per cent cut in automobile production was a "distinct possibility," although "still in the pure speculation stage and that if a sharp upswing occurred in defense demands, the manufacture of furnaces, refrigerators and other household goods might also be curtailed.

Before the senate committee okayed the house-approved ship seizure bill, it to 4, it defeated a move by Senators Vandenberg, Republican, Michigan, and Clark, Democrat, Missouri, to prohibit the transfer of any Axis ships to Britain.

This amendment was defeated, 10 to 6, but its sponsors gave notice that they would press for its adoption in the senate floor when the measure comes up for debate, probably late this week. Senators Johnson, Republican, California, and Burton, Republican, Ohio, joined Vandenberg and Clark in voting against the bill as a whole.

Those voting for it were reported by committee members to be Senators Bailey, Caraway, Overton, Bilbo, Radcliffe, Pepper, Lee, Hill and Mead, Democrats, and Senators McNary and Barbour, Republicans.

Senator Pepper, Democrat, Florida, and the offices of Senators George, Democrat, Georgia, and Mead, Democrat, New York, reported their mail was bringing demands for a declaration of war against Germany and Italy, while Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, said in an interview that the administration "apparently" was trying to induce Elzie to enter the war by promising "goods we could not deliver."

Proposed Rates. The proposed loan rates would be: Cotton, 13.49 cents; corn, 69.87 cents; wheat, 96.22 cents; flue-cured tobacco, 19 cents; fire and dark-cured tobacco, 8.41 cents; and barley, 15.53 cents.

Senator Bankhead, Democrat, Alabama, said that present loans on cotton were about 9 cents, or 56 per cent of parity; on corn were 60 cents or more than 70 per cent, and on wheat, 60 cents, or about 56 per cent.

(Parity prices are designed to give farmers the same purchasing power, in terms of other commodities, they had from 1909 to 1914.)

Is Compromise. The new legislation was a compromise between original senate and house bills. The senate had proposed 85 per cent parity loans and acreage reductions and sought an indefinite time limit on the program. The house had approved 75 per cent loans, stiff increases in penalties and proposed to limit the life of the bill to 1941 crops.

The compromise retained the senate loan figure and the house penalty provisions and time limit. The Agriculture Department had indicated favor for loans at 75 per cent of parity. Officials there said that boosting the rate to 85 per cent probably would result in a 10 to 20 per cent increase in retail prices of pork and dairy products because of higher feed costs.

The new penalty rates for marketing above-quota supplies of wheat and corn would be 50 per cent of the basic loan rates. Pres-

Senate House Unit Approves Farm Loans

Would Peg Prices at 85 Per Cent of Parity.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—(P)—Legislation to require mandatory price-pegging loans on major farm crops at 85 per cent of parity, and to impose heavy penalties for marketing "abnormal production" was approved today by a senate-house committee.

The group, appointed to reconcile divergent house and senate views, estimated the program would assure farmers co-operating with this year's crop control measures a return of $1.15 a bushel for wheat, 87 cents a bushel for corn and 16 cents a pound for cotton. (These figures are averages and include government benefit payments.)
